Elvis put to rest as fans grieve

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — The rose-covered coffin of Elvis Presley, the king of rock 'n' roll, was sealed in its crypt in a magnolia-shaded mausoleum Thursday as thousands of grief-stricken fans strained at the cemetery gates.

Only the drone of locusts broke the pastoral silence in Forest Hills Cemetery when six pallbearers carried the seamless copper coffin containing Presley's body to its final resting place.

The sobs and wails of his anguished fans, held back by police at the gates a mile from the gray marble mausoleum, did not reach the nearly 200 invited mourners — friends, family and show business stars.

"HE'S GONE, he's gone," sobbed a woman in a crowd 6,000 strong that watched 10 white Cadillacs lead the 49-car funeral procession past the wrought iron gates of Graceland Mansion on the two-mile trip to the cemetery.

Before it arrived, the crowd waiting outside the cemetery pressed so hard they threatened to smash in the double wooden gates. Hastily-summoned police reinforcements moved them back.

The smell of 2,200 floral arrangements was overwhelming in the heavily-wooded cemetery. The arrangements covered the area around the mausoleum and around the grave of Presley's mother, 300 yards away. The family announced that flowers from the arrangements would be given away at the cemetery to Presley's admirers Friday.

AS NIGHT fell over this mourning city, the crowds that had jammed 80,000 strong outside the mansion and the cemetery since the legendary singer's death Tuesday finally began to fade.

Joe Esposito, Presley's road manager, told reporters after the interment that the private funeral in the 18-room mansion lasted longer than expected because "everybody filed by to say goodbye to Elvis."

Esposito, who found Presley's body face down in an upstairs bathroom Tuesday afternoon, said a gospel quartet sang "How Great Thou Art" and "Sweet, Sweet Spirit." Then, as the mourners were viewing the body for the final time, a singer in his troupe, Cathy Westmoreland, sang "a lot" of Elvis' own songs.

The euglogy was given by Joe Kahane, a comedian in Presley's show. Esposito, appearing groggy from shock and grief, said Kahane "talked about us on the road, how it was, how good it was with Elvis."

PRESLEY WAS buried wearing a diamond ring set amid jagged lightning bolts and bearing the letters TCB. This, Esposito said, was an inphrase with the troupe meaning "Take Care of Business." He said Presley once had 200 of the rings made and gave them to his friends.

Throngs keep mourning vigil outside Presley home

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — As the last of the 49-car funeral procession dwindled from sight down Elvis Presley Boulevard, a young woman fell to the pavement, clutching a grimy stuffed dog.

"Oh, Elvis," she moaned, over and over.

Medics carried her to a grassy area across from the singer's Graceland mansion and, after considerable effort, brought her back to coherency.

She identified herself as Sally Yorty, 25, of Phoenix, Ariz., and she said she flew to Memphis as soon as she could scrape together the money for a one-way ticket.

"I don't have more money," she cried, her thin blonde hair matted with sweat. "I don't have a plane ticket. I don't have Elvis. All I can think of is Elvis."

OTHER FANS sat on blankets, folding chairs and sidewalks, watching the procession of white limousines bearing Presley's family and friends. Radios blared and some in the crowd sang Presley hits to themselves.

Many in the crowd were visiting Shriners, in town for a convention.

"This just ruined my trip," said Evelyn Wilkin of Martinez, Ga., whose husband John was attending

No sobs, but sighs as suburbanites lose top lottery

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — The Northwest suburbs has no new millionaires today, but two area residents did not go away empty-handed from Thursday's double Illinois State Lottery millionaire drawing.

While Lady Luck handed the big prizes to C. E. Volini of Glenview and Edith Lucas of Harrisburg; Chester Poplonski of Arlington Heights won $10,000 and 11 year-old Glenn Guercios of Mount Prospect became $1,500 richer.

Both of the losers seemed to take their setbacks in stride, replacing their hopes for instant wealth with less spectacular plans.

"I think I'll just pay my taxes, they went up more than 30 per cent," Poplonski, who works for Honeywell Inc., told Gov. James R. Thompson when asked about his plans.

"LOSING IS not all that bad," said Glenn's father, Carl.

The new millionaires were less calm. Both families were crying tears of joy when their names were pulled in separate drawings.

Volini, who works for a Chicago insurance company, drove more than 100 miles between drawings to check on the family dog that had been left at a Bloomington motel. He said he still had not calmed down from the noontime excitement when Mrs. Lucas became the state's 22nd millionaire.

BESIDES PAYING the taxes on his home at 2006 Spruce Terr., Poplonski said he may pay off more of his mortgage with the winnings.

The Guercios of 1818 Tano Ln., Mount Prospect, had no immediate plans for their winnings, but it appears to be something less than planned. Before the drawing, the family had visions of minibikes, sail boats and airplanes dancing in their heads.

Both Poplonski and the Guercios vowed there always will be a next time.

"I would have rather had the million, but this isn't too bad," Poplonski said.

Crosstown pact to mean roadway repairs locally

Major road resurfacing, intersection improvements and bridge replacements will begin shortly in the Northwest suburbs as a result of the compromise over the Crosstown Expressway.

An estimated $22.8 million of road improvements are slated for the Northwest as a result of an agreement among the City of Chicago, state and federal officials on the disposition of federal funds reserved for the now defunct leg of the Crosstown Expressway.

The largest project slated for the area is the resurfacing of Northwest Highway from Elmwood Avenue in Palatine to the Tri-State Tollway in Des Plaines. Estimated to cost $4.3 million, the project will cover 9 miles of roadway.

THIS PROJECT and several others are scheduled over the next two years. The recommended list of projects must be approved by the Northwest Municipal Conference by Sept. 15, since projects slated for fiscal 1978 must be cleared by Sept. 30.

Other projects include:

- Widening and resurfacing of River Road from Milwaukee Road to Foundry Road in Mount Prospect. Estimated cost is $1.5 million for five miles of roadway.
- Resurfacing of Dundee Road from Northwest Highway near Inverness to Hicks Road north of Pala-

A YEAR HAS PASSED since 14-year-old Ellen Anderson lost her leg in a hit-and-run accident, but the unsolved case still haunts Sgt. Emerson Krapf, a Lake County Sheriff's investigator. On his daily patrol Krapf is always on the lookout for his suspect: a late model, light green Mercury Montego car — and its driver.

Hunt never ends for a hit, run cop

by DIANE GRANAT

Whenever Sgt. Emerson Krapf arrives on the scene of a traffic accident involving a green Mercury Montego, something clicks in the back of his mind.

He automatically goes to the front of the car and lifts the hood. He glances at the grille work and the parking lights to see if any replacement parts were installed.

So far he has found nothing unusual. Every car looks innocent.

This type of check has become a routine for Krapf, a Lake County Sheriff's investigator, in his search for the car involved in a horrifying hit-and-run accident one year ago in which 14-year old Ellen Anderson lost her right leg. The hunt is for a car, but finding the vehicle, Krapf hopes, will lead to the real offender: the driver.

THE ACCIDENT occurred last Aug. 19 when the unknown driver struck Ellen's bicycle near U.S. Rte. 45 and Port Clinton Road near Half Day.

Ellen was riding down Rte. 45 near her Prairie View home when she saw the car coming. As she rode her bicycle away from the road the driver apparently veered towards her. The car then ran over her, made a U-turn and came back and ran over her again.

Today, after four operations, the amputation of her leg four inches below the hip and a year of therapy, Ellen is "doing pretty good," her father, David Anderson, said.

Anderson said she is walking now with the help of an artificial leg. In September, Ellen will begin her sophomore year at Stevenson High School, which she was supposed to enter as a freshman last fall when the accident occurred.

THINGS ARE also looking up financially for the Andersons, who had only about $10,000 in insurance when Ellen was hospitalized.

Last fall their Vernon Township neighbors helped defray the family's staggering medical bills. They set up a fund at the First National Bank of Lincolnshire and today the account has received almost $90,000, enough to cover Ellen's medical costs, Anderson said.

The accident "is long gone now,"

Humphrey cancer terminal

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A team of surgeons discovered "terminal cancer" in Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey Thursday, but said he can still return to the Senate and may live for years with the help of chemotherapy.

Dr. John Najarian, who led the four-member surgical team that operated for more than three hours on the former vice president, said the physicians could not remove the cancerous tumor attached to a pelvic bone.

"It is terminal cancer if you accept the fact that we cannot remove it surgically," Najarian told a news conference.

The 66-year-old "happy warrior" of the Democratic party underwent surgery at the University of Minnesota Hospitals because of an obstruction blocking the lower colon and causing pain for the past six months.

"HE HAS CANCER and it has been treated by chemotherapy in the past and will be in the future," Najarian said. "But chemotherapy is only successful in slowing the growth. It cannot eradicate it."

Najarian said Humphrey who had a cancerous bladder removed in New York last October, would probably be able to take chemotherapy for "for, five, maybe six years."

The medical team performed a colostomy, bypassing the obstruction and rerouting the colon through a hole in the abdomen. A similar opening was made through the abdominal wall for urination when Humphrey's bladder was removed.

NAJARIAN SAID there is no way to tell whther the cancer has spread to other parts of Humphrey's body, but it is "very common to be local and not spread."

"The senator tolerated the surgery very well," he said. "He seems as healthy and vigorous as ever except for the tumor and I think he'll go through chemotherapy enthusiastically."

Najarian said Humphrey probably will be able to leave the hospital and go to his Waverly, Minn., home in

"If he looks good, which I anticipate that he will, and if at that time he's eating well and feeling well, it is my intention to try to aid the senator to get back to the Senate sometime in early September," he said.

"THAT IS ALSO his plan. I see no reason why that cannot be carried out."

Humphrey was not able to have visitors Thursday. He said recently, "You have to believe that somehow you can win this fight. My faith and hope get me from day to day."

Humphrey, who lost weight and much of his hair from earlier chemotherapy, said in the August Reader's Digest: "If you don't overcome self pity, the game's all over. I think the biggest mistake people make is giving up."

Najarian said, "We always hope chemotherapy will eliminate cancer, but the reality is that it will only keep it in check."

Death came calling on woman alone

by RUTH MUGALIAN

Two cats were the only company she had.

No one ever went to her door; she spent her holidays alone.

And now that Marjorie Tannhauser is dead, there probably won't be mourners at her graveside.

SHE DIED ALONE ine her condominium apartment at Three Fountains on the Lake, in Rolling Meadows. For two weeks she lay there as her cats grew thinner.

Maybe she knew she was dying and wanted to provide for her only friends. Throughout her home were open cans of cat food.

Only the smell coming from her condominium prompted neighbors to be concerned.

She has a daughter who has been notified of her mother's death. But the two women didn't get along, and the report is that funeral arrangements will be turned over to a lawyer. No one has claimed the body.

"She had no friends," said Roland Waters, her next-door neighbor who called the police. "She never had any visitors and no one in the building was friends with her."

WATERS SAID Mrs. Tannhauser often disappeared for weeks at a time. Once in 1974 he phoned the police after he noticed a foul odor. Police broke down the door and found her unconscious.

When Mrs. Tannhauser disappeared about five weeks ago, Waters said at first he thought she had gone away. But then he heard the radio and television from behind her door.

Even lately when he again noticed a foul smell, he waited about three days before phoning the police.

"The last time this happened the police had to break down the door and the condominium association had to pay for a new one because she wouldn't. I wanted to make sure something was really wrong."

Police arrived at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday and had a maintenance man open the door.

"WHEN THEY OPENED the door, oh, my God, it stunk up the whole building," Waters said. "They had to air the whole place out."

Waters waited outside as police went in and found Mrs. Tannhauser dead. Her body was badly decoposed.

Her home was littered with open cat food cans, old newspapers and empty cans. Public works employes and firefighters spent the next few hours cleaning it up. They had to wear oxygen masks.

The Cook County Medical Examiner's Office said Mrs. Tannhauser died of natural causes. Waters said that was what he suspected, although he didn't know how anyone could be so sure.

"I doubt if any coroner could ever determine the cause of death," he said. "She was so badly decomposed. She was bloated and her body was falling apart."

He said police told him there was no evidence of suicide, but her door was blocked with furniture.

WATERS SAID Mrs. Tannhauser moved to Three Fountains about five years ago, shortly after her husband died.

"I guess she just went to pot after that," he said.

Mrs. Tannhauser had intestinal surgery a few months ago, so Waters knew her health wasn't good.

She never caused any trouble or commotion. Whatever she did, she always did it quietly behind closed doors.

"She never bothered anybody," Waters said.

Look-alike to continue Elvis style, fans approve

by KEN VANDERBEEK

Rick Saucedo is still going to imitate rock 'n' roll's king, Elvis Presley, but he doesn't know how long.

The 21-year-old Presley look-alike who has sung, wiggled and gyrated like a carbon copy of his idol for four years, opened Wednesday night at Orrie's of Wheaton. But Saucedo fears his act may be doomed because of Elvis' sudden death Tuesday.

"I thought about retiring when I heard about Elvis' death," Saucedo said before his performance. "But I'm not sure." There was little emotion in his voice as he spoke softly, glancing down at his cup of coffee.

"I'LL KNOW THOUGH by the way the audience reacts tonight," he said. "I don't want to stop imitating Elvis. I've said it before, Elvis is the greatest, and if through my shows his greatness can somehow continue on, then that's all I can ask."

Despite his enthusiasm, Saucedo said he has something more to worry about than a potentially tough audience. Since Presley's death, Saucedo has received 12 threatening phone calls. His manager, Dennis Pedersen, of Schaumburg, said the threats have come from people who think Saucedo is trying to capitalize on Presley's death.

"Why should the reactions happen now," Pedersen said. "Rich's been performing Elvis for four years and all his audiences have reacted favorably until now.

"We're not going to change anything we've been doing for four years." Pedersen said.

In shaky voice, Saucedo told the audience during his act, he wants to continue imitating Presley because it's "a tribute to Elvis. We have lost a great person."

SAUCEDO, a native of Chicago's Northwest Side, was supposed to open his act at Orrie's nightclub Tuesday night, but he said he was not up to performing because of Elvis' death.

"It was like my own father daying," Saucedo said.

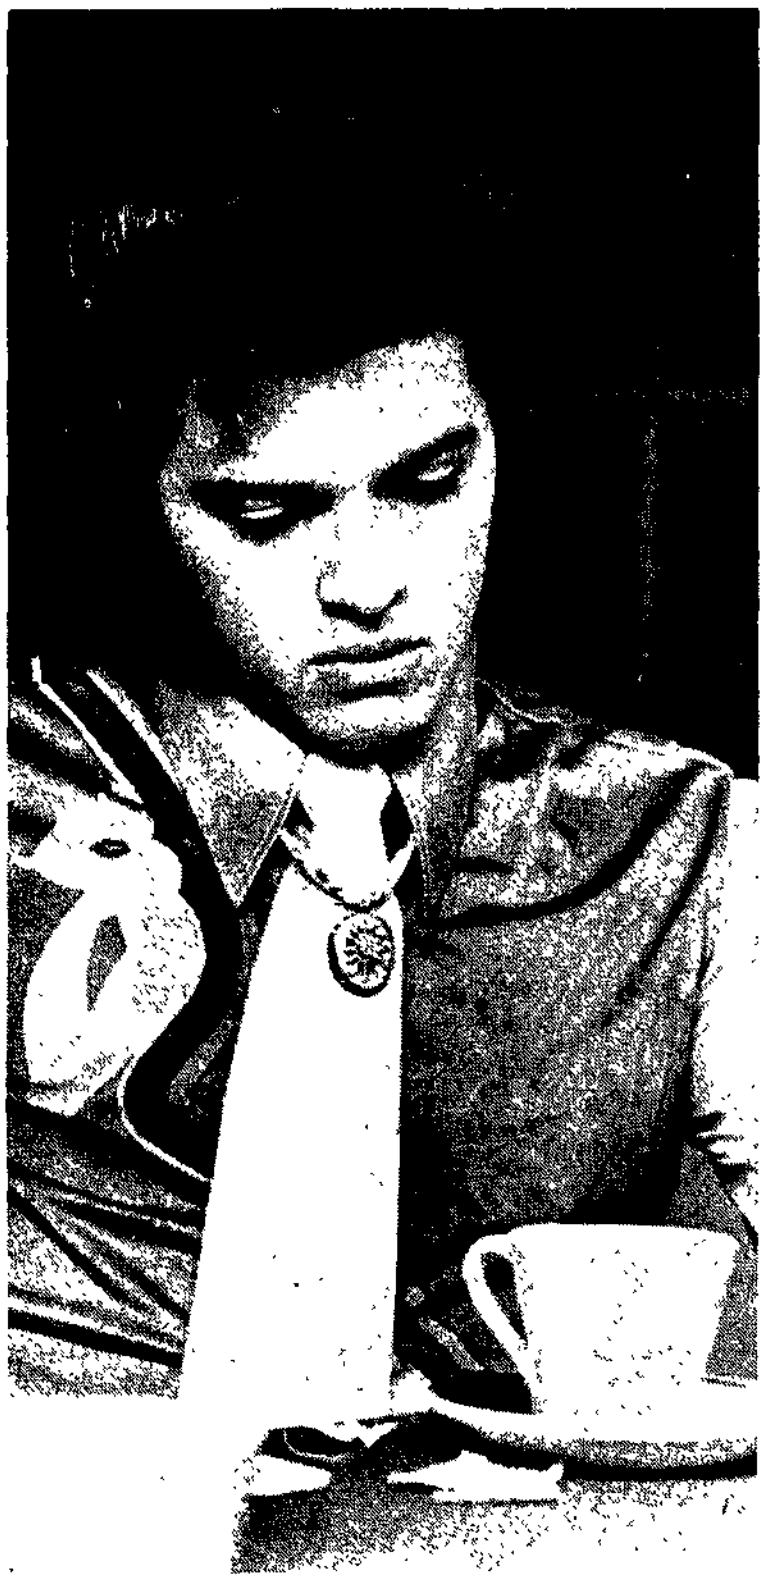
Saucedo never met Presley but he said his dream was to sing side by side with the king of rock.

Saucedo opened his performance Thursday with a moment of prayer. His performance was entitled "American Trilogy" which he said was a dedication of Presley's best songs.

AT TIMES Saucedo's voice quivered as he talked fondly of Presley between songs.

"I might have to stop my act," Saucedo said during one interlude.

But Saucedo continued gyrating just as intensely as Elvis had in his heydey. And the audience approved.



ALTHOUGH HE promised to keep imitating Elvis Presley, Rick (Elvis) Saucedo Thursday said he didn't know how long audiences would accept his characterization of their dead idol.

Lance cleared of banking improprieties by officials

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal banking officials said Thursday there was nothing illegal in Bert Lance's multi-million dollar personal financial transactions between 1975 and 1977. President Carter said he should stay as budget director.

"Bert, I am proud of you," Carter said, warmly shaking his hand as Lance began a 50-minute nationally televised news conference dealing with his personal financial dealings as president of a Georgia bank.

Carter had interruted his vacation and flew from Camp David, Md., to offer Lance his backing on television.

"MY FAITH IN THE character and competence of Bert Lance has been reconfirmed," the President said. "His service to this country can and should continue."

However, Comptroller of the Currency John Heimann said some pre-1975 charges are unresolved, charges that still could peril Lance's job as one of the most powrful members of the administration.

Lance said he had not offered Carter his resignation at any time during the month-long investigation by the comptroller's office and does not believe his ability to function has been compromised or damaged.

"As far as I'm concnerned, I intend to continue with those responsibilities," Lance said. "I have no grudges to bear, I have no resentment."

LANCE DEFENDED the banking practices that came into question during the investigation and said it was important to understand "the circumstances" surrounding much of his activity.

Lance said even if agencies besides the comptroller's office continue investigating his activities, "I would hope we won't have that cloud continue."

"I would hope at some time we would resolve all the questions."

A reporter asked whether Lance thought his activities gave at least the appearance of impropriety.

"Appearance always I'm sure is in the eye of the beholder," Lance said. "I don't know of any circumstances where I've done anything improper or illegal and I think that report says that."

MUCH OF THE REPORT dealt with the establishment of correspondent relationships — non-interest bearing bank accounts — by Lance's National Bank of Georgia with large banks in New York and Chicago and $6 million in personal loans Lance subsequently received from those banks.

The report looked into questions raised by Lance's use of the credit of his Georgia bank to obtain personal loans.

"We do not believe the information developed to date in the inquiry warrants the prosecution of any individuals," Heimann said.

He promised that his office, which regulates the nation's 4,700 federally chartered banks, would review federal banking laws to determine whether they should be amended "to require public disclosure of such practices or other remedial action."

ALTHOUGH THE report dealt with many of Lance's controversial transactions, the case is not finished.

The Senate Government Affairs Committee, chaired by Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., said the panel will have hearings on the Lance matter beginning Sept. 7. Lance will testify Sept. 8.

Ribicoff said "the basic allegations have been disproved." He said Lance followed "generally accepted banking practices, right or wrong. The question is whether the banking rules should be changed, not whether Lance should resign."

Blue Cross to try to hold down costs

NEW YORK (UPI) — The powerful Blue Cross Assn. of America, insuring 85 million, will start a program Jan. 1 to hold down hospital costs and insurance premiums, it was announced Thursday.

Included will be a fraud squad to cut out abuse in claims and other areas.

If it works, hospital bills and insurance premiums may not grow at the alarming rate of recent years.

There also is a chance unnecessary surgery, over-hospitalization and uncalled for laboratory and X-ray tests will be cut down.

WALTER J. McNERNEY, president of the giant health insurance association, a collection of 69 Blue Cross plans, said the new rules are expected to let some of the air out of ballooning hospital bills.

These have been going up at the rate of 15 per cent a year, twice the rate of other items on the consumer price index.

One of the new rules takes aim at unnecessary or overly long hospital stays and surgery.

McNerney said the program calls for a check up on the "medical necessity and appropriateness of hospital inpatient stays and services rendered."

MEDICAL CONSUMER critics, congressional investigators and public health authorities have been particularly critical of excessive testing and screening by pathologists and radiologists. Most hospitals make money on the laboratory and X-ray departments — so the more tests, the more money.

The Blue Cross screening teams will look closely at this situation, according to McNerney.

Other requirements under the new Blue Cross containment program:

• Educational programs directed at individual subscribers, groups and providers stressing prevention of unnecessary and inappropriate use of health care services.

• Active coordination of benefits to eliminate duplicate payments to subscribers who are covered by more than one health policy. This is not legally possible in most states, so Blue Cross will work to change laws making duplicate coverage lawful.

• An analysis of each claim to see if subscribers are getting all of the services which have been billed to the plan.

"We are also suggesting that all the plans increase their use of certain optional activities that keep costs down," McNerney said.

"These include home care, second opinion surgery, ambulatory-same day surgery and preadmission testing," McNerney said.

"The Blue Cross organization has an obligation to influence the health care delivery system with which it closely interacts.

"It is clearly a shared obligation and responsibility with institutional health providers, physicians, government, labor, business and our subscribers."

Anderson said."She's OK and that's my main concern. Now you have to go on with life."

But for Krapf, who is in charge of the case, no hit-and-run accident ever fades away until it is solved.

"It hasn't been forgotten," Krapf said, "but we get so many of them."

One day after Ellen's accident, for instance, a 5-year-old boy was killed in another hit-and-run accident near Barrington.

AND NOW BESIDES being preoccupied with Mercury Montegos, Krapf's attention is turned to other things, like late-model Chrysler station wagons, believed to be the type of car involved in a fatal hit-and-run early this month near Kildeer.

Krapf said the Anderson case has been particularly frustrating because no witnesses have come forward.

"There have to be witnesses," he said. "It's kind of hard to believe there were no witnesses on Rte. 45 just before dark on a beautiful night.

"The only thing we had was an injured girl with her leg torn off," Krapf said. But based on the paint on

Ellen Anderson

Ellen's clothing and the debris at the scene of the accident, police believe the car was a light green 1974 to 1976 Mercury Montego with a missing parking light and damage to the grille work, he said.

USING THAT INFORMATION police located more than 500 Mercury Montegos in Lake County, Krapf said. Then, working many double shifts, Krapf visited each owner and asked to examine their cars. He even checked to see if the cars had been painted recently to disguise the telltale green.

The police also alerted all area towing companies and gas stations, police departments between Joliet and Milwaukee, and sent out a five-state bulletin on the car. Letters were sent to local Mercury dealers and junk yards asking them to refer the names of people who came in for replacement parts for a parking light or grille work.

"We had a few possibilities, but everything checked out to be negative," Krapf said. "We did about everything we could, but you have to have a little luck along with you."

One thing, however, continues to nag Krapf. He said he believes the driver was someone who lived within a five-mile radius of the scene of the accident.

While it may be just intuition which makes him believe that, Krapf said, "I think the car is still in the garage somewhere in that area down there."

So he keeps on: "still hunting, still digging, never give up."

the convention. "I cried all the way from Georgia. I haven't got a tear left."

Businesses along the funeral route displayed signs in their windows and billboards bore farewells to Presley. "Elvis the King" and "Memphis in Mourning," they said.

IN THE HOURS before the procession began, the crowd almost had a parade route atmosphere. Drums beat lively rhymths near the gates of Forest Hill Cemetery, where the turn-of-the-century mausoleum is nestled among softly rolling hills.

Dozens of police guarded the gates and the four-foot stone wall of the cemetery. Less than 100 fans managed to reach a back road near the mausoleum, where they watched the arrival of Presley's body through a vine-covered chain-link fence.

Most of the fans were anxious to gain entry to the well-manicured cemetery area, where the body of Presley's mother, Gladys Smith Presley, is buried near the mausoleum.

"When can I see the grave?" asked one man in a wheelchair. "Keep moving," a policeman told him.

Police Director E. Winslow Chapman said police would stand guard at the gates for only a few days. After that, he said, "the cemetery people and the Presleys are going to have to make permanent arrangements."

"I'm afraid there are going to be people trying to get inside the mausoleum tomorrow and the day after, and the day after that," Chapman said. "There's nothing like an Elvis fan."

Carter had interruted his vacation and flew from Camp David, Md., to offer Lance his backing on television.

"MY FAITH IN THE character and competence of Bert Lance has been reconfirmed," the President said. "His service to this country can and should continue."

However, Comptroller of the Currency John Heimann said some pre-1975 charges are unresolved, charges that still could peril Lance's job as one of the most powrful members of the administration.

Lance said he had not offered Carter his resignation at any time during the month-long investigation by the comptroller's office and does not believe his ability to function has been compromised or damaged.

"As far as I'm concnerned, I intend to continue with those responsibilities," Lance said. "I have no grudges to bear, I have no resentment."

LANCE DEFENDED the banking practices that came into question during the investigation and said it was important to understand "the circumstances" surrounding much of his activity.

Lance said even if agencies besides the comptroller's office continue investigating his activities, "I would hope we won't have that cloud continue."

"I would hope at some time we would resolve all the questions."

A reporter asked whether Lance thought his activities gave at least the appearance of impropriety.

"Appearance always I'm sure is in the eye of the beholder," Lance said. "I don't know of any circumstances where I've done anything improper or illegal and I think that report says that."

MUCH OF THE REPORT dealt with the establishment of correspondent relationships — non-interest bearing bank accounts — by Lance's National Bank of Georgia with large banks in New York and Chicago and $6 million in personal loans Lance subsequently received from those banks.

The report looked into questions raised by Lance's use of the credit of his Georgia bank to obtain personal loans.

"We do not believe the information developed to date in the inquiry warrants the prosecution of any individuals," Heimann said.

He promised that his office, which regulates the nation's 4,700 federally chartered banks, would review federal banking laws to determine whether they should be amended "to require public disclosure of such practices or other remedial action."

ALTHOUGH THE report dealt with many of Lance's controversial transactions, the case is not finished.

The Senate Government Affairs Committee, chaired by Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., said the panel will have hearings on the Lance matter beginning Sept. 7. Lance will testify Sept. 8.

Ribicoff said "the basic allegations have been disproved." He said Lance followed "generally accepted banking practices, right or wrong. The question is whether the banking rules should be changed, not whether Lance should resign."

Blue Cross to try to hold down costs

NEW YORK (UPI) — The powerful Blue Cross Assn. of America, insuring 85 million, will start a program Jan. 1 to hold down hospital costs and insurance premiums, it was announced Thursday.

Included will be a fraud squad to cut out abuse in claims and other areas.

If it works, hospital bills and insurance premiums may not grow at the alarming rate of recent years.

There also is a chance unnecessary surgery, over-hospitalization and uncalled for laboratory and X-ray tests will be cut down.

WALTER J. McNERNEY, president of the giant health insurance association, a collection of 69 Blue Cross plans, said the new rules are expected to let some of the air out of ballooning hospital bills.

These have been going up at the rate of 15 per cent a year, twice the rate of other items on the consumer price index.

One of the new rules takes aim at unnecessary or overly long hospital stays and surgery.

McNerney said the program calls for a check up on the "medical necessity and appropriateness of hospital inpatient stays and services rendered."

MEDICAL CONSUMER critics, congressional investigators and public health authorities have been particularly critical of excessive testing and screening by pathologists and radiologists. Most hospitals make money on the laboratory and X-ray departments — so the more tests, the more money.

The Blue Cross screening teams will look closely at this situation, according to McNerney.

Other requirements under the new Blue Cross containment program:

- Educational programs directed at individual subscribers, groups and providers stressing prevention of unnecessary and inappropriate use of health care services.
- Active coordination of benefits to eliminate duplicate payments to subscribers who are covered by more than one health policy. This is not legally possible in most states, so Blue Cross will work to change laws making duplicate coverage lawful.
- An analysis of each claim to see if subscribers are getting all of the services which have been billed to the plan.

"We are also suggesting that all the plans increase their use of certain optional activities that keep costs down," McNerney said.

"These include home care, second opinion surgery, ambulatory-same day surgery and preadmission testing," McNerney said.

"The Blue Cross organization has an obligation to influence the health care delivery system with which it closely interacts.

"It is clearly a shared obligation and responsibility with institutional health providers, physicians, government, labor, business and our subscribers."

Anderson said."She's OK and that's my main concern. Now you have to go on with life."

But for Krapf, who is in charge of the case, no hit-and-run accident ever fades away until it is solved.

"It hasn't been forgotten," Krapf said, "but we get so many of them."

One day after Ellen's accident, for instance, a 5-year-old boy was killed in another hit-and-run accident near Barrington.

AND NOW BESIDES being preoccupied with Mercury Montegos, Krapf's attention is turned to other things, like late-model Chrysler station wagons, believed to be the type of car involved in a fatal hit-and-run early this month near Kildeer.

Krapf said the Anderson case has been particularly frustrating because no witnesses have come forward.

"There have to be witnesses," he said. "It's kind of hard to believe there were no witnesses on Rte. 45 just before dark on a beautiful night.

"The only thing we had was an injured girl with her leg torn off," Krapf said. But based on the paint on

Ellen Anderson

Ellen's clothing and the debris at the scene of the accident, police believe the car was a light green 1974 to 1976 Mercury Montego with a missing parking light and damage to the grille work, he said.

USING THAT INFORMATION police located more than 500 Mercury Montegos in Lake County, Krapf said. Then, working many double shifts, Krapf visited each owner and asked to examine their cars. He even checked to see if the cars had been painted recently to disguise the telltale green.

The police also alerted all area towing companies and gas stations, police departments between Joliet and Milwaukee, and sent out a five-state bulletin on the car. Letters were sent to local Mercury dealers and junk yards asking them to refer the names of people who came in for replacement parts for a parking light or grille work.

"We had a few possibilities, but everything checked out to be negative," Krapf said. "We did about everything we could, but you have to have a little luck along with you."

One thing, however, continues to nag Krapf. He said he believes the driver was someone who lived within a five-mile radius of the scene of the accident.

While it may be just intuition which makes him believe that, Krapf said, "I think the car is still in the garage somewhere in that area down there."

So he keeps on: "still hunting, still digging, never give up."

the convention. "I cried all the way from Georgia. I haven't got a tear left."

Businesses along the funeral route displayed signs in their windows and billboards bore farewells to Presley. "Elvis the King" and "Memphis in Mourning," they said.

IN THE HOURS before the procession began, the crowd almost had a parade route atmosphere. Drums beat lively rhymths near the gates of Forest Hill Cemetery, where the turn-of-the-century mausoleum is nestled among softly rolling hills.

Dozens of police guarded the gates and the four-foot stone wall of the cemetery. Less than 100 fans managed to reach a back road near the mausoleum, where they watched the arrival of Presley's body through a vine-covered chain-link fence.

Most of the fans were anxious to gain entry to the well-manicured cemetery area, where the body of Presley's mother, Gladys Smith Presley, is buried near the mausoleum.

"When can I see the grave?" asked one man in a wheelchair. "Keep moving," a policeman told him.

Police Director E. Winslow Chapman said police would stand guard at the gates for only a few days. After that, he said, "the cemetery people and the Presleys are going to have to make permanent arrangements."

"I'm afraid there are going to be people trying to get inside the mausoleum tomorrow and the day after, and the day after that," Chapman said. "There's nothing like an Elvis fan."

Officials pledge support of tax assessment lid

Influential state and county officials agreed Thursday night to support a tax assessment ceiling in Cook County.

Appearing before an audience of some 5,000 angry taxpayers in Evanston. County Board Pres. George W. Dunne said he would support not only a lid on future assessment increases but also a legislative rollback of assessment hikes experienced by North and Northwest suburban homeowners this year.

Dunne noted that the average American now works from Jan. 1 to May 1 just to pay government taxes.

"When that cost of government reaches to the end of June — when 50 cents of every dollar you earn goes to government — I'm fearful that people may logically conclude it's a luxury they no longer can afford."

JOHN CASTLE, director of the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs, said, "A ceiling of some kind on assessment increases simply has to be if there is ever to be a leveling off of property taxes in Cook County."

Castle, who was Gov. James R. Thompson's representative at Thursday night's taxpayer's protest meeting, said he planned to hold hearings in October on property tax reform.

Dan Pierce, attorney representing Assessor Thomas M. Tully, said Tully will propose that the General Assembly "put a cap on increases in assessments of all homeowners in Cook County."

He also said that Tully will recommend that the homestead exemption that allows homeowners over 65 to lower their assessment by $1,500 be increased to a $5,000 deduction in order to ease the property tax burden on senior citizens.

THE POLITICAL promises have little immediate effect on the irate taxpayers who have been protsting in the North and Northwest suburbs over the past two weeks. Thy recited stories of tax increases of 50 to 300 per cent and demanded tax relief.

"It's finally coming out and I'm not surprised," Dunne said as he left the meeting that was calld by James Tobin, president of National Taxpayers United of Illinois.

"When you take 50 cents of every dollar out of everybody's pocket you're going to get emotional reactions, Dunne said.

Despite reports that the so-called taxpayers strike has had little effect on tax collection this year, Tobin said the protest was not in vain.

"Two weeks ago w announced the strike and tonight we have representatives of some of the most powerful men in the state before us," he said.

TOBIN VOWED to continue the protest until the group's demands are met.

Earlier Dunne told the crowd that local government and not Cook County were responsible for the tax hikes. The county has not raised its real estate tax since 1972 he said, although it has enacted sales taxes on liquor and gasoline.

"Seventy-three cents of every dollar taxed by Cook County goes to the criminal justice system for the protection of persons and property," Dunne said. "In 1977 after years of compulsory education in this country and centuries of churches, people are still misbehaving."

WMAQ faces suit by Annerinos

The mother and brother of the late Sam Annerino, a reputed mobster who was gunned down July 25, Thursday filed an $80 million damage suit against a WMAQ television reporter and the WMAQ station that covered Annerino's funeral. Annerino, 34, was shot with a shotgun while sitting in his auto outside a furniture store in Oak Lawn. Police said he was killed apparently by competitors in the lucrative stolen auto racket. The suit, filed in Cook County Circuit Court on behalf of Annerino's brother, Thomas, and mother, Perlie, charges that WMAQ-TV reporter Rich Samuels' account of an altercation at the July 29 funeral was false and injured Thomas Annerino's reputation. At the funeral, Annerino allegedly punched Samuels in the jaw and damaged a $40,000 "minicam" camera.

Barker case delayed again

A decision on whether Nancy Barker, 22, is able to stand trial for the April 28 stabbing death of her father in their Arlington Heights home has been postponed until Sept. 16. Judge James M. Bailey Thursday ordered the case delayed for the second time. Miss Barker's attorney, public defender Sheila Murphy, was on vacation Thursday and unavailable for comment on the reason for the continuance. Miss Barker was indicted in May for murdering her father, Robert, 61, at their 710 S. Chestnut Ave. home by stabbing him with a kitchen knife.

Bet service injunction set

Off-track betting messenger services, operating under the protection of a court injunction that technically applies to only a few of them, are costing Illinois nearly $20,000 a day in horse racing revenues, Jewel Klein, attorney for the Illinois Racing Board, said Thursday. The messenger services were outlawed by the legislature in early July because they reduced attendance and wagering at the race tracks, but enforcement of the law was halted by the injunction July 14. An appellate court granted the injunction when messanger service owners appealed lower court rulings upholding the constitutionality of the law. Klein said the state's revenue losses attributed to the off-track services totaled $1.5 during the first seven months of the year.

He said the two went into the garage on the property and spent about 20 minutes there before the blast. William Joyce was injured and the unidentified man killed when they went back to the garage as the bomb exploded. Joyce was listed in fair condition today at St. Mary's Hospital, Milwaukee.

Dist. 59 wrapup

$16.5 million budget adopted

A tentative $16.5 million budget for the 1977-78 school year was adopted by the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education.

Although the budget adopted this week shows a 2.9 per cent decrease in expenditures over last year, expenditures will rise about $600,000 when a final budget, including provisions for salary increases and unemployment compensation is adopted Sept. 19.

Receipts from property taxes, state aid and other sources will total $16,553,904 in 1977-78, Business Mgr. Arthur Perry said.

Anticipated expenditures in the education fund, the largest of the district's five budgetary funds, total $11.3 million, a 7.3 per cent decrease over last year's $12.2 million.

Largely responsible for the decreased expenditures is the transfer of $218,000 in maintenance salaries from the education fund to the building fund, the absence of salary increases for teachers and administrators and the dismissal of 30 classroom teachers because of declining enrollment, Perry said.

Salary figures in the tentative budget are set at the 1976-77 level. This will be changed when salary negotiations, currently underway, are concluded.

The district's building fund shows an 8.3 per cent increase in expenditures from the $1.2 million budgeted last year to the $1.3 million budgeted for 1977-78.

To repay past debts in the education and building funds, the district expects to borrow $9.2 million from its working cash fund, Perry said. Although the working cash fund has only $5.9 million in assets, Perry said that if the timing and amount of tax collections is on target, the fund will be able to make the necessary loans and the district will not have to issue tax anticipation warrants.

Expenditures in other funds are:

- Bond and interest fund, $2.7 million, up from $2.5 million last year.
- Retirement fund, $295,066, up from $269,000 last year.
- Insurance fund, $95,265, up from $59,189 last year.

Testing guidelines approved

Guidelines for Dist. 59's 1977-78 testing program have been adopted by the board of education.

School officials will develop performance tests for students in grades one through three to see how well they are mastering the district's curriculum. Also, standardized exams other than the Iowa Tests of Basic Skills are to be reviewed and tested

Both guidelines grew out of teacher and administrator criticism that the Iowa tests do not necessarily measure what is being taught in the district and may not be the most suitable achievement tests to use.

The criticism came this past spring after the release of Iowa test scores showing Dist. 59 sixth and eighth grades are slightly below the national average in math skills and reading. Seventh graders also fell below the national average in reading.

Other guidelines for the district's 1977-78 testing program include annually administering the full battery of Iowa tests to students in grades four to eight; administering only part of the Iowa battery of tests to third graders; and administering the Scholastic Testing service tests to sixth and eighth graders in January.

In the past, the Iowa tests have annually been administered to third through eighth graders. The national standarized tests cover five major areas — vocabulary, reading, language skills, work study skills and math.

When the Iowa tests measure achievement only, the STS test measures aptitude as well as achievement, school officials said. High School Dist. 214 routinely uses this test to determine academic placement for incoming freshmen.

The Iowa tests are to be administered in early November, about a month later than last year.

Standardized test scores in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 this year show students are well above the national average in all academic areas.

The results of the Iowa Tests of Basic Skills administered in March were presented to the Dist. 23 Board of Education this week by Assistant Supt. Gerald McGovern.

Students in first through seventh grades were tested in five major areas — vocabulary, reading, language skills, work study skills and math.

A composite score of 2.5 for a first grader meant he achieved a test score the same as someone in a national sample who had been receiving a formal education for two years and five months. At the time the test was given in March, a score of 1.7 was the national average for first graders.

Composite grade averages for Dist. 23 show students achieving levels of eight to 13 months higher than the national average for their age.

The composite Iowa test scores by grade for Dist. 23 are:

- First grade, 2.5;
- Second grade, 3.5;
- Third grade, 4.6;
- Fourth grade, 5.6;
- Fifth grade, 7.0;
- Sixth grade, 7.8;
- Seventh grade 9.0.

"We're very pleased with the results," McGovern said. "Our students consistently are performing well above the national average in all academic areas."

$3.1 million budget adopted

A final $3.1 million budget for the 1977-78 school year has been adopted by the board.

Expenditures are expected to exceed revenues by $211,142. The deficit will be made up by the $901,427 cash carryover the district has from the 1976-77 school year, leaving an anticipated balance of $690,285 next June, Business Mgr. Mark Manske said.

Total expenditures in the district's five funds are 11 per cent more than last year. This is largely the result of the restoration of some of the $110,000 in budget cuts the board made last year as well as salary raises and increased utility and insurance costs.

Expenditures in the education fund will total $2,261,259, up from last year's $1,998,659. The fund's revenues will fall $84,892 short of meeting its expenditures.

The borrowing level will remain stable at $554,000, though most of the monies will be invested and spent only if a cushion is needed, he said.

Expenditures in other funds are:

- Building fund, $182,560, up from $192,560 last year;
- Bond and interest fund, $218,339, down from $221,000 last year;
- Transportation fund, $184,754, up from $147,300 last year.

The district has $142,060 in its working cash fund which will be used for loans to the eduation and building funds.

$3 million road work must wait two years

More than $3 million in improvements to Wilke Road from Central Road to Northwest Highway probably won't begin for another two years, though funds are available for most of the work.

James Muldowney, Rolling Meadows city engineer, said final agreements have to be signed, engineering plans drawn up by Cook County and land between Central Road and Kirchoff Road must be condemned to provide rights of way.

Widening and other improvements are expected to cost about $3.3 million.

THE COOK COUNTY Highway Dept. has agreed to coordinate the project and pay for 15 per cent of the work. The federal government in 1974 approved a request from Rolling Meadows to finance 70 per cent of the project between Kirchoff Road and Euclid Ave. The city estimated that cost at about $460,000. Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights will each pay 7 5 per cent.

Although the federal funding has been approved, the city won't get the money until it submits a detailed description of the project. Muldowney said he expects the county to take at least a year to draw up engineering plans.

"We won't be starting in 1978 unless the county moves very fast," Muldowney said. "They don't even have this on their five-year program. Of course they can shuffle their priorities."

The city council in March passed a resolution asking the county to prepare an agreement for council approval among the city, Arlington Heights, Cook County and the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

"THAT IS WHERE we stand right now," Muldowney said. "We've been working on it for three years and we've been pushing and tugging."

Proposed improvements include widening the street from two lanes to four lanes, new storm sewers, street lighting between Kirchoff Road and Northwest Highway, and installation of traffic signals at the Central Road, Kirchoff Road, Campbell Street and Euclid Avenue intersections.

The improvements also will make the existing Wilke Road between Central and Kirchoff roads a cul-de-sac because the new road will be located farther east, adjacent to the Wilke-Kirchoff water detention basin.

Rolling Meadows will not participate in work north of Euclid because that stretch of the road is in Arlington Heights.

The village has reached an agreement on financing that section with the county, Village Mgr. L A. Hanson said.

Boosters seek parent members

The Arlington Cardinal Booster Club is beginning a drive for new members among parents of Arlington High School students.

The club is asking for the active and financial support of all parents to help maintain and expand the organization's many activities.

The Booster Club provides bus transportation to games not at the school, furnishes a phone in the locker rooms so all athletes can call home free of charge for a ride when necessary and sponsors three award nights for athletes and cheerleaders.

The club is encouraging students to interest their parents in joining. A large source of revenue for the projects is money raised through the membership drive.

Membership fees are $5 for a family. Interested parents are asked to write Darlene Sanders, membership chairman, at 502 W. Euclid, Arlington Heights.

A $1.3 million improvement is scheduled for the intersection of Golf and River roads.

WORK ALSO IS planned on five of the bridges crossing the Des Plaines River. Widening is planned for the bridges at Palatine Road, Devon Avenue, Dundee Road and Touhy Avenue. The Central Road bridge is slated for rehabilitation.

The bridge work is estimated to cost $1.75 million.

Eleven traffic signal improvements have been tentatively slated at nine Northwest suburban intersections. They include Rand Road at Baldwin Road, Northwest Highway at Colfax Street and Baldwin Road, Milwaukee and Dundee roads, Milwaukee and Palatine roads, Golf and Mount Prospect roads, Higgins at Busse Road and Oakton Street, Palatine Road at Smith Road, Brockway Street and Schoenbeck Road.

$16.5 million budget adopted

A tentative $16.5 million budget for the 1977-78 school year was adopted by the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education.

Although the budget adopted this week shows a 2.9 per cent decrease in expenditures over last year, expenditures will rise about $600,000 when a final budget, including provisions for salary increases and unemployment compensation is adopted Sept. 19.

Receipts from property taxes, state aid and other sources will total $16,553,904 in 1977-78, Business Mgr. Arthur Perry said.

Anticipated expenditures in the education fund, the largest of the district's five budgetary funds, total $11.3 million, a 7.3 per cent decrease over last year's $12.2 million.

Largely responsible for the decreased expenditures is the transfer of $218,000 in maintenance salaries from the education fund to the building fund, the absence of salary increases for teachers and administrators and the dismissal of 30 classroom teachers because of declining enrollment, Perry said.

Salary figures in the tentative budget are set at the 1976-77 level. This will be changed when salary negotiations, currently underway, are concluded.

The district's building fund shows an 8.3 per cent increase in expenditures from the $1.2 million budgeted last year to the $1.3 million budgeted for 1977-78.

To repay past debts in the education and building funds, the district expects to borrow $9.2 million from its working cash fund, Perry said. Although the working cash fund has only $5.9 million in assets, Perry said that if the timing and amount of tax collections is on target, the fund will be able to make the necessary loans and the district will not have to issue tax anticipation warrants.

Expenditures in other funds are:

- Bond and interest fund, $2.7 million, up from $2.5 million last year.
- Retirement fund, $295,066, up from $269,000 last year.
- Insurance fund, $95,265, up from $59,189 last year.

"Our aim: To fear God, tell the truth and make money"
H C PADDOCK, 1852 - 1935

Elvis Presley— an era's symbol

Millions of young lovers broke up to the tune of "Heartbreak Hotel" or "Don't be Cruel." Millions of others still pause when "their song" — "Are You Lonesome Tonight?" or "It's Now or Never" — is played.

And the singer, the sad-eyed country boy with disreputable long hair and hips that drove parents crazy, became a symbol for those who were teenagers in the '50s.

Now Elvis is dead — at 42. And the stories are already being told of how he was haunted by success. He was afraid of airplanes and crowds and believed he possessed supernatural power, the stories say. As the years pass more books will appear telling us he was a Howard Hughes in gold lame.

What is it about our relationship to our heroes that we must believe that success can't make them happy? And what is it in the nature of success in our society that our belief is so often reality? Those questions remain unanswerable.

His fans knew things had not been going well in recent years. He had grown fat as he approached middle age. His on-stage gyrations were shadows of the energy he brought to his youthful performances.

And yet, his fans could look in their own mirrors and realize that time had not missed them, either. The bobby-soxers had become wives and mothers who sometimes had to touch up the grey in hair that had long abandoned ponytails. Their young prince charmings, who had once sported crewcuts or ducktails, were fighting spreading midriffs and receding hairlines.

And the nation was different. The younger brothers and sisters of Elvis' first fans admired him as the one who started it all, but their principal allegiance was elsewhere — with The Beatles, The Rolling Stones or Bob Dylan.

Today's children are listening to John Denver, Elton John and a group called "Kiss." The on-stage antics of some of their stars shock the same kids whose parents were shocked by Elvis.

Elvis was too young to die. But in an odd way, his death wasn't unexpected because all the myths of our culture say that those who reach such heights particularly in show business, cannot expect a happy ending.

There will be plenty of talk about his passing bringing the end of an era. And in a way, that will be true. Those who were young when he started will never feel quite so young again.

But Rock 'n' Roll remains the principal form of popular music, and Elvis Presley was one of its pioneers.

That's not a bad legacy for a singer who was called a "passing fad" when he first hit the charts in 1956.

Home buyers protection

Stories like the one we reported last week involving the Leroy Keenan family of Elk Grove Village seem to be a continuing part of suburban living.

It's a familiar problem. A family buys a new home, probably trodding through the mud and cold to determine where the lot would be located. They sign on the dotted line, the house is constructed, and when they move in, they discover a "surprise," in this case a gas station, is planned next door.

Through the years, we've told stories of cemeteries, sewage treatment plants and office buildings being built adjacent to new single family homes. In some cases developers knew all along what the construction plans were, but failed to tell the buyer. So when the homeowner discovers the problem, his mortgage signed, it's too late.

Such controversies are unnecessary.

The best way to avoid misunderstanding is for villages and cities who judge developers' plans to require them to explain clearly what they want to build and where, in the beginning. And then require them to display those plans where prospective buyers can see them.

That way a buyer can check to see where the gas station is going to be. And if he buys next door to one, he won't have cause to complain later.

The rabbits ran raucously in Australia's out-back

Jim Bishop

The clipper Lightning slipped into Hobson's Bay under sail. She was heavy with molasses, hemp, dried fruit and one large crate marked for Mr. Thomas Austin, Barwin Park, Australia. The contents were not secret.

All the way from Liverpool to Australia — a long voyage in the middle of the 19th century — the crew had fed those 24 rabbits. There were bets that there would be more rabbits when they reached port than when they left.

They did not multiply, even though the manifest indicated 12 females and 12 males. They survived, as Thomas Austin had survived the same voyage with Mrs. Austin a dozen years earlier.

AUSTIN WAS A mutton-chopped, mustachioed Englishman who missed hunting small game. There were no rabbits — or hares — in Australia. This was about to be corrected. Austin released them in the brush outside his farm. "Give them a year," he said, "and then we will start hunting."

He was right. In a year Austin enjoyed hunting rabbits. Amd the next year. And the next. In the fourth year, a few officials referred to the scampering rabbits as a pest.

They loved Australia. Austin wrote to the government and warned that there must be 10,000 alive in the brush. It seemed to him that they were migrating north and west out of his province of Victoria.

AT GLEN ALBE, a conservationist named John Robertson charged a hunter with shooting a rabbit on private property. The prisoner was fined 10 pounds. Two years later, the rabbits ate Robertson's ranch and he spent all he had — 5,000 pounds — trying to exterminate all of them.

In 1883, the rabbits outnumbered the people. The government of New South Wales, north of Victoria, spent over one million pounds ($5 million at that time) trying to kill the cottontails. In six years, the government shot, poisoned and slaughtered 10 million rabbits and lost the war.

The rabbits invaded the province of Queensland, further north. The several governments imposed an extra tax on the people in order to kill rabbits. The cute critters fell in love with Australia. All of it. They hopped and ate and mated; and mated and hopped. And mated and mated.

They skirted the great natural desert in the center of Australia. Ranchers and farmers were helpless when they spotted the horde. They boarded themselves in their homes with their families and watched in horror as the vegetation was chewed to the roots.

THE GOVERNMENT of Australia spent hundreds of millions trying to control Austin's rabbits. At the turn of the century, men became frightened at their lack of understanding of nature and its control.

The great province of Western Australia, which occupies a third of the land mass, did not wait to see the rabbits. They built a close-knit wire fence 2,000 miles long. The officials kept assuring the people that it was worth the tremendous cost. As the fence was completed, a few rabbits were discovered on the other side.

Men beat them to death with clubs, set out tasty traps of poison, and discovered that they were killing sheep by the thousands. In the last province, the Northern Territory, the government did nothing.

They just waited. The faces of men were drawn as the rabbits cluttered the roads and farms up to Perth. There they stopped. In a manner of speaking, Austin's rabbits owned Australia.

IT IS ONE OF the ironies of nature that after they had infested the land, they declined in numbers. They seemed exhausted by their population explosion. Ranchers put up expensive fences.

The rabbits were outside, looking in. They became prey to the wild carniverous game of Australia. Around 1920, an Australian could shoulder his gun and say, "I'm going rabbit hunting," In order to find them, he needed good dogs to flush them.

Australia hasn't built a monument in a public square to Thomas Austin. Nor to a rabbit . . .

He opposes Red China

Secretary of State Vance has planned a visit to Communist China to begin communication between U.S. China. He hopes to learn as much as possible regarding the conditions and needs of that country. I'm certain that he could have obtained in-depth data regarding the internal conditions of Communist China by interviewing the jet pilot commander who recently defected from Communist China to the Republic of Free China. Obviously, this person was part of the elite group (preferential treatment) within his country because of the position he held.

We are just beginning to learn of the internal conditions of Communist China through the defector. He has already shared information regarding the persecution that continues to go on in mainland China — the millions of people who have been killed since the Communists came to power the thousands of incarcerations, the denial of basic human rights to the people and their strategy of aggression towards other nations.

There are rumors appearing in the press declaring that the Carter Administration plans to negotiate with Communist China. The State Department has discussed the topic of the sale of arms and technology to the Peking government. The ramifications of these topics must strike terror in the Republic of Free China as well as that sector of the globe including the Philippines, Malaysia, Thailand and Burma. these countries are part of the strategy of conquest in Communist China's military plan.

It appears to me that each new administration disregards the historical lessons of the past and sets out to establish their own recognition and/or record in the field of foreign affairs. The reality of the situation is that Communist China is an aggressive state.

I hope Congress continues to ban funds to communist nations since I don't want my tax dollars to subsidize the jailers of the captive peoples. Our congressmen should vote against funds to such agencies as the World Bank, the International Development Agency plus other financial institutions/organizations that loan funds to communist regines.

'Report on rape'

Since The Herald started their police notebook, I have not seen one time where a rape has been reported. If you are about to tell me that rape just doesn't occur in the Northwest suburbs, you better tell it to someone who will believe you.

Rapes have been steadily increasing and if suburban women are to become aware of this problem, they must be shown there is reason for worry. That's why many rape groups are finding it next to impossible to get volunteers. These women don't realize that rape just doesn't only occur on the South or West side of Chicago, but right in their own neighborhoods and many go unreported.

Wake up, Herald! This isn't the 19th Century. I certainly don't expect you to print the name of the victim, but the least you could do is print where the rape occurred and what time of day or night it happened.

Carter's alien plan won't solve the problem

by B. J. CUTLER

President Carter has recognized the grave problem posed by the estimated 6 million to 12 million illegal aliens in this country. But his program to deal with it seems flawed and unworkable.

In his message to Congress, Carter correctly said "millions of undocumented aliens . . . have breached our nation's immigration laws, displaced many American citizens from jobs and placed an increased financial burden on many states and local governments."

Carter proposed the following major steps:

• AMNESTY FOR foreigners who sneaked into the country before 1970 and lived here continuously since. They could stay, be eligible for most forms of federal aid and bring in their parents, spouses and children.

• "Nondeportable" status for those who came between 1970 and last Jan. 1. They could remain and work for five years after the law takes effect.

• Civil fines for employers who engage in a "pattern" of "knowingly" hiring illegal aliens.

• Adding 2,000 agents (about 40 per cent) to the undermanned border patrol in hopes of slowing the flood of illegal border crossers.

CARTER'S PROPOSED penalty of a $1,000 fine for hiring an illegal alien is weak and riddled with outs. For example, an employer would get off if the worker showed him a Social Security card. Forgeries are cheap and easy to come by.

In fact, the forgery of "amnesty kits" — faked documents — has become an industry in Mexican border towns in anticipation of amnesty.

Aliens will have great incentive to be able to "prove" they were in the country before 1970 or before the start of 1977, and massive resort to forgery must be expected. Since millions of persons may be involved, immigration offices and the courts will be unable to deal with the pressure.

If Carter's suggestions pass Congress, as a practical matter everyone who can show he was here before 1977 will be able to remain indefinitely — and eventually to bring his relatives. The typical alien has five members of his immediate family at home, and thus our population could swell by as many as 40 million people in the next few years.

AND THIS IN a country that is having desperate trouble providing enough jobs for its own citizens.

Not only that, but in the minds of impoverished Mexican peasants — the major source of illegal immigration — one amnesty will be followed by another. They will figure if they can get into America and hide for a few years, they too will benefit from a future dispensation.

The only indisputable part of the Carter program is the need for a strengthened border patrol. The 2,000 extra men the President wants should be hired fast. They'll have their work cut out for them as soon as word of his amnesty spreads south of the border.

"Our aim: To fear God, tell the truth and make money"
H.C. PADDOCK, 1852 - 1935

Elvis Presley— an era's symbol

Millions of young lovers broke up to the tune of "Heartbreak Hotel" or "Don't be Cruel." Millions of others still pause when "their song" — "Are You Lonesome Tonight?" or "It's Now or Never" — is played.

And the singer, the sad-eyed country boy with disreputable long hair and hips that drove parents crazy, became a symbol for those who were teenagers in the '50s.

Now Elvis is dead — at 42. And the stories are already being told of how he was haunted by success. He was afraid of airplanes and crowds and believed he possessed supernatural power, the stories say. As the years pass more books will appear telling us he was a Howard Hughes in gold lame.

What is it about our relationship to our heroes that we must believe that success can't make them happy? And what is it in the nature of success in our society that our belief is so often reality? Those questions remain unanswerable.

His fans knew things had not been going well in recent years. He had grown fat as he approached middle age. His on-stage gyrations were shadows of the energy he brought to his youthful performances.

And yet, his fans could look in their own mirrors and realize that time had not missed them, either. The bobby-soxers had become wives and mothers who sometimes had to touch up the grey in hair that had long abandoned ponytails. Their young prince charmings, who had once sported crewcuts or ducktails, were fighting spreading midriffs and receding hairlines.

And the nation was different. The younger brothers and sisters of Elvis' first fans admired him as the one who started it all, but their principal allegiance was elsewhere — with The Beatles, The Rolling Stones or Bob Dylan.

Today's children are listening to John Denver, Elton John and a group called "Kiss." The on-stage antics of some of their stars shock the same kids whose parents were shocked by Elvis.

Elvis was too young to die. But in an odd way, his death wasn't unexpected because all the myths of our culture say that those who reach such heights particularly in show business, cannot expect a happy ending.

There will be plenty of talk about his passing bringing the end of an era. And in a way, that will be true. Those who were young when he started will never feel quite so young again.

But Rock 'n' Roll remains the principal form of popular music, and Elvis Presley was one of its pioneers.

That's not a bad legacy for a singer who was called a "passing fad" when he first hit the charts in 1956.

Acid rains precipitate Europe pollution protest

by DAVID F. SALISBURY

In an old Peanuts comic strip, Snoopy dashes back and forth slurping up snowflakes. In the final frame, the famous beagle makes a sour face and exclaims, "EEYuk, fluorine."

If, instead of fluorine, Snoopy had blamed sulfuric or nitric acid for the bad taste of that final snowflake he would have foretold a world pollution problem, the seriousness of which is gradually becoming known.

For the last 20 years the rain and snow falling over much of Europe and North America has grown hundreds, even thousands of times more acidic. The sufur and nitrogen oxides that result from burning fossil fuels appear to be the cause of rains which more and more frequently pour down with an acidity equal to that of lemon juice.

THE RESULTS: widespread loss of some species of fish, possible damage to certain kinds of trees and crops, and a human health hazard that has some experts concerned, according to growing evidence.

The international conference on acid precipitation in Norway last year recommended on the basis of what is now known about the effects of acid rain that all governments reconsider their approaches to the control of these pollutants.

In the past year the magnitude of the problem has become a little clearer although few corrective steps have been taken.

But Norway and Sweden are talking seriously about bringing the issue before the World Court and demanding that other nations pay them for the damage that has been done and seek ways to eliminate the problem. Such a course would require Europe to spend billions of dollars.

ONE OF THE first comprehensive studies on how these air pollutants move through the atmosphere was released in July. Sponsored by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, this study investigated the situation in northwest Europe.

Although far from definitive, its results confirm that sulfur compounds in particular travel long distances, writes R. A. Barnes, a scientist with the United Kingdom's Department of the Environment, in a summary for the journal Nature. This possibility was not seriously considered until recently.

The OECD report also suggests that Austria, Finland, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland all involuntarily "import" more than twice as much sulfurous air as they "export." It finds further that there is a strong acid background in rainfall from Atlantic air that probably comes from North American sources.

The reasons the long-range transport of these pollutants are a matter of serious concern were summarized in the report of the Norway conference:

BREATHING ACID aerosols appears to be detrimental to human health; acid rains and snow already have caused the death of large numbers of fish and other aquatic creatures; the rains may be stunting the growth of millions of acres of forest, adversely affecting cropland, and eating away at numerous man-made structures.

Moreover, resent research in Canada has established a link between acidity and the levels of organic mercury (a potent human nerve poison) in fish and so adds another major concern.

The international problems involved are illustrated by the situation in Scandinavia. "The silent spring — maybe that is an appropriate term to describe the outlook for many lakes and rivers in Scandinavia," Norwegian expert Lars N. Overrein says. Pollution-laden masses of air from England, France, Germany, Eastern Europe, and even North America, converge on Scandinavia.

According to the OECD report, Norway receives roughly one quarter of its total sulfur dose from Britain, the largest source of this pollutant in Europe, and this is double the amount released domestically. As much as half a ton of sulfate (the salt of sulfuric acid) has fallen per square mile in a single episode, Norwegian scientists say.

BY TRACKING the course of episodes of acid rain the Scandinavian scientists report in a joint paper prepared for the United Nations water conference last spring that they have connected them with air masses moving over highly industrialized areas of Europe. This conclusion has been confirmed by the OECD findings.

"High acidity has caused hundreds of lakes in Norway to lose their fish," laments a summary of Norwegian research on this topic. It continues by warning that large additional areas of the southern part of the country are threatened and that the ill effects are moving gradually north.

Acid levels tend to be the highest during the first heavy rains in autumn and with the early snow melts in spring. This cycle "is particularly critical for fish, because this is when spawning and hatching take place, and it is the reproductive process that appears most sensitive to acid stress," the summary states.

The acidity in Scandinavia is particularly damaging because the rocks and soil in the area are deficient in limestone. This provides bicarbonate which can neutralize the acid in other regions. The northeastern U.S. and the Laurentian shield area in Canada are also limestone-poor. As a result acid downpours have led to rapid extinction of fish populations in some areas. Trout and salmon are particularly sensitive to acid stress, the Scandinavians have found.

IT IS IN northern Quebec that scientists at the Domtar Research Center in Ontario have linked acid levels with concentrations of poisonous organic mercury in fish.

Surveys of this area have found that pike and pickerel have mercury levels "well above" the standard for human consumption that has been set in the U.S. and Canada.

As a lake becomes more acidic, the amount of organic mercury fish accumulate through their gills and in their food increases, the Domtar scientists have found.

Compared to the impacts chronicled above, the effects of acid rain on forest and cropland is poorly defined. However there are disturbing indications that current acid levels may be reducing productivity of certain trees and plants.

WHEN COMPARING two similar forest areas with different degrees of acid rainfall, Swedish scientists found the region with higher acid levels to be less productive. In addition, laboratory experiments have shown that misting pine trees with acidic water reduces needle growth.

In some of the most painstaking experiments performed to date, scientists at the Corvallis laboratory of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency have found that growth of red alder and sugar maple is slowed. The acid rain leeches calcium from the forest floor at greatly increased rates and so may disrupt the forest's nutrient cycle.

The most obvious impact of acid rain on agriculture in the parts of the United States affected by acid rain is the increasing use of lime to neutralize the soil. In addition, laboratory experiments have found that the germination of tomatoes and radish yields are adversely affected. But the story is far from clear.

A Delicate Balance

Drugs, sex hangups spark violence in sick: experts

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Are there any trends or significant personality traits that seem universal in loner killers like "Son of Sam"?

Faced with this question, major psychiatrists can agree only that no single factor twists a normal person into a killer, but drugs or sexual hangups may contribute to triggering violent behavior in a person who is already very sick.

The psychiatrists stressed that we would be overrun with killers like "Son of Sam" if such behavior were caused merely by rough childhoods, impotence, latent homosexuality, divorced parents, drugs or being adopted.

DR. EMMANUEL TANAY, Chairman of the American Psychiatry Committee on Psychiatry and the Law, said killers like Son of Sam often hear voices, take orders from the voices, just as "Sam" suspect David Berkowitz has told police he followed "Sam's" instructions.

But why was a person as sick as the .44-caliber killer on the streets in the first place? Tanay said:

"I am appalled at how difficult it is for relatives, interested citizens and doctors to hospitalize the dangerous among mentally sick people. We are railroading people out of the hospitals, making it difficult to admit others, and then suddenly we are surprised that a psychotic terrorizes a community."

Dr. Donald Lunde, Associate Professor of Psychiatry at the Stanford University School of Medicine who recently published a book, "Murder and Madness," said he believes killers like the "Son of Sam" are paranoid schizophrenics.

ONE PER CENT of the population has some form of schizophrenia, he said, but of the 20,000 murders committed in the country each year, only about 100 are committed by "para-schizoids."

The trouble is, Lunde said, it is difficult, if not impossible, to predict which "para-schizoids" will commit murder. "It is a very rare occurrence, and this is no reason to put every paranoid schizophrenia patient in a mental hospital."

What about the "voices" telling Son of Sam to kill? Were they there all the time or were they sparked by drugs?

Lunde said the voices are part of the original psychosis. "The drugs may make the illness worse or bring it to the surface, but they are not the cause," he said.

DR. PERRY OTTENBERG of the Council of Social Issues of the American Psychiatric Assn. said murders like the "Son of Sam" "have been quietly psychotic for years . . . Chronic psychotics, in fact, may tend to be more peaceful than the general public."

But how do you find the psychotics who are desperately ill and leaning to violence?

"Part of the problem . . . is that people are shut off from each other and not involved," Ottenberg said. "The families or friends don't know what to do. So they tend to ignore the signals, cover up, deny the tough problem — until, of course, the blow-up occurs."

He also stressed the sexual problems Berkowitz described to police. "I think it was very obvious about the sexual problems," Ottenberg said. "This man picked courting couples, people in cars. He apparently resented them very much. And he obviously didn't know how to have pleasure. This is very common in violent persons."

OTTENBERG, WHO HAS studied violence for 20 years, said, "Tenderness and love and the ability to make love require a little bit of assertiveness and a little mastery over aggression.

"The ability to love keeps violence in control," he said. "People who kill like this don't have the ability to love."

Can Son of Sam get well?

"If this person was extremely wealthy, he might get expensive treatment over the years and get a new identity," Ottenberg said.

"It could take five to 20 years. It might take several hundred thousand dollars to treat someone like Son of Sam. What happens has to do with society's priorities."

Public questions Carter ability

by GODFREY SPERLING JR.

New checks into public opinion indicate what appears to be a contradiction:

People generally like the President's style. And a solid majority approve of the way he is handling his job.

But, at the same time, public distrust in government and government leaders at every level persists. The meaning, according to political leaders around the U.S. who perceive this irony, is this:

• The high approval rating given the President is still quite tentative. The public still has serious anxieties about how easily presidential power can be misused. The echo of both Vietnam and Watergate continues to be heard in the land.

Thus, it seems, that the public still withholds its all-out, complete confidence in this President — despite the fact that his support nationally now is much bigger than it was when he won the very close election.

• The questions now being raised about Bert Lance, the President's close friend and adviser, who is also his director of the Office of Management and Budget, tend to reinforce this widespread latent distrust.

• The inquiry into Korean bribery of members of Congress also does much to deter the building of public confidence in Congress — and in government leaders generally.

The public perception, it seems, is that the congressional probe into this matter has lagged badly. This, too, had reinforced public suspicions that the legislative body as in the past is still very reluctant to police itself.

People generally, it seems, trust President Carter. They believe he is sincere and leveling with them.

But, at the same time, there has been in recent weeks a growing public disbelief in the President's ability to fulfill his promises — particularly those that relate to improving the economy.

THIS, TOO, MIGHT be viewed as somewhat of a contradiction — this trust in Carter as a person but not too much trust in his ability to put his words into action.

Carter, responding to a question about public criticism of his effort to improve the economy, said in an ABC news interview Aug. 14 that his administration has "made some good progress already in economic affairs" even though many people remain impatient "perhaps overly so" — with the pace of that progress.

As an example, he said, unemployment has fallen from 8 per cent to 6.9 per cent during his seven months in office, "which is some improvement."

Acid rains precipitate Europe pollution protest

by DAVID F. SALISBURY

In an old Peanuts comic strip, Snoopy dashes back and forth slurping up snowflakes. In the final frame, the famous beagle makes a sour face and exclaims, "EEYuk, fluorine."

If, instead of fluorine, Snoopy had blamed sulfuric or nitric acid for the bad taste of that final snowflake he would have foretold a world pollution problem, the seriousness of which is gradually becoming known.

For the last 20 years the rain and snow falling over much of Europe and North America has grown hundreds, even thousands of times more acidic. The sufur and nitrogen oxides that result from burning fossil fuels appear to be the cause of rains which more and more frequently pour down with an acidity equal to that of lemon juice.

THE RESULTS: widespread loss of some species of fish, possible damage to certain kinds of trees and crops, and a human health hazard that has some experts concerned, according to growing evidence.

The international conference on acid precipitation in Norway last year recommended on the basis of what is now known about the effects of acid rain that all governments reconsider their approaches to the control of these pollutants.

In the past year the magnitude of the problem has become a little clearer although few corrective steps have been taken.

But Norway and Sweden are talking seriously about bringing the issue before the World Court and demanding that other nations pay them for the damage that has been done and seek ways to eliminate the problem. Such a course would require Europe to spend billions of dollars.

ONE OF THE first comprehensive studies on how these air pollutants move through the atmosphere was released in July. Sponsored by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, this study investigated the situation in northwest Europe.

Although far from definitive, its results confirm that sulfur compounds in particular travel long distances, writes R. A. Barnes, a scientist with the United Kingdom's Department of the Environment, in a summary for the journal Nature. This possibility was not seriously considered until recently.

The OECD report also suggests that Austria, Finland, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland all involuntarily "import" more than twice as much sulfurous air as they "export." It finds further that there is a strong acid background in rainfall from Atlantic air that probably comes from North American sources.

The reasons the long-range transport of these pollutants are a matter of serious concern were summarized in the report of the Norway conference:

BREATHING ACID aerosols appears to be detrimental to human health; acid rains and snow already have caused the death of large numbers of fish and other aquatic creatures; the rains may be stunting the growth of millions of acres of forest, adversely affecting cropland, and eating away at numerous man-made structures.

Moreover, resent research in Canada has established a link between acidity and the levels of organic mercury (a potent human nerve poison) in fish and so adds another major concern.

The international problems involved are illustrated by the situation in Scandinavia. "The silent spring — maybe that is an appropriate term to describe the outlook for many lakes and rivers in Scandinavia," Norwegian expert Lars N. Overrein says. Pollution-laden masses of air from England, France, Germany, Eastern Europe, and even North America, converge on Scandinavia.

According to the OECD report, Norway receives roughly one quarter of its total sulfur dose from Britain, the largest source of this pollutant in Europe, and this is double the amount released domestically. As much as half a ton of sulfate (the salt of sulfuric acid) has fallen per square mile in a single episode, Norwegian scientists say.

BY TRACKING the course of episodes of acid rain the Scandinavian scientists report in a joint paper prepared for the United Nations water conference last spring that they have connected them with air masses moving over highly industrialized areas of Europe. This conclusion has been confirmed by the OECD findings.

"High acidity has caused hundreds of lakes in Norway to lose their fish," laments a summary of Norwegian research on this topic. It continues by warning that large additional areas of the southern part of the country are threatened and that the ill effects are moving gradually north.

Acid levels tend to be the highest during the first heavy rains in autumn and with the early snow melts in spring. This cycle "is particularly critical for fish, because this is when spawning and hatching take place, and it is the reproductive process that appears most sensitive to acid stress," the summary states.

The acidity in Scandinavia is particularly damaging because the rocks and soil in the area are deficient in limestone. This provides bicarbonate which can neutralize the acid in other regions. The northeastern U.S. and the Laurentian shield area in Canada are also limestone-poor. As a result acid downpours have led to rapid extinction of fish populations in some areas. Trout and salmon are particularly sensitive to acid stress, the Scandinavians have found.

IT IS IN northern Quebec that scientists at the Domtar Research Center in Ontario have linked acid levels with concentrations of poisonous organic mercury in fish.

Surveys of this area have found that pike and pickerel have mercury levels "well above" the standard for human consumption that has been set in the U.S. and Canada.

As a lake becomes more acidic, the amount of organic mercury fish accumulate through their gills and in their food increases, the Domtar scientists have found.

Compared to the impacts chronicled above, the effects of acid rain on forest and cropland is poorly defined. However there are disturbing indications that current acid levels may be reducing productivity of certain trees and plants.

WHEN COMPARING two similar forest areas with different degrees of acid rainfall, Swedish scientists found the region with higher acid levels to be less productive. In addition, laboratory experiments have shown that misting pine trees with acidic water reduces needle growth.

In some of the most painstaking experiments performed to date, scientists at the Corvallis laboratory of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency have found that growth of red alder and sugar maple is slowed. The acid rain leeches calcium from the forest floor at greatly increased rates and so may disrupt the forest's nutrient cycle.

The most obvious impact of acid rain on agriculture in the parts of the United States affected by acid rain is the increasing use of lime to neutralize the soil. In addition, laboratory experiments have found that the germination of tomatoes and radish yields are adversely affected. But the story is far from clear.

A Delicate Balance

Drugs, sex hangups spark violence in sick: experts

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Are there any trends or significant personality traits that seem universal in loner killers like "Son of Sam"?

Faced with this question, major psychiatrists can agree only that no single factor twists a normal person into a killer, but drugs or sexual hangups may contribute to triggering violent behavior in a person who is already very sick.

The psychiatrists stressed that we would be overrun with killers like "Son of Sam" if such behavior were caused merely by rough childhoods, impotence, latent homosexuality, divorced parents, drugs or being adopted.

DR. EMMANUEL TANAY, Chairman of the American Psychiatry Committee on Psychiatry and the Law, said killers like Son of Sam often hear voices, take orders from the voices, just as "Sam" suspect David Berkowitz has told police he followed "Sam's" instructions.

But why was a person as sick as the .44-caliber killer on the streets in the first place? Tanay said:

"I am appalled at how difficult it is for relatives, interested citizens and doctors to hospitalize the dangerous among mentally sick people. We are railroading people out of the hospitals, making it difficult to admit others, and then suddenly we are surprised that a psychotic terrorizes a community."

Dr. Donald Lunde, Associate Professor of Psychiatry at the Stanford University School of Medicine who recently published a book, "Murder and Madness," said he believes killers like the "Son of Sam" are paranoid schizophrenics.

ONE PER CENT of the population has some form of schizophrenia, he said, but of the 20,000 murders committed in the country each year, only about 100 are committed by "para-schizoids."

The trouble is, Lunde said, it is difficult, if not impossible, to predict which "para-schizoids" will commit murder. "It is a very rare occurrence, and this is no reason to put every paranoid schizophrenia patient in a mental hospital."

What about the "voices" telling Son of Sam to kill? Were they there all the time or were they sparked by drugs?

Lunde said the voices are part of the original psychosis. "The drugs may make the illness worse or bring it to the surface, but they are not the cause," he said.

DR. PERRY OTTENBERG of the Council of Social Issues of the American Psychiatric Assn. said murders like the "Son of Sam" "have been quietly psychotic for years . . . Chronic psychotics, in fact, may tend to be more peaceful than the general public."

But how do you find the psychotics who are desperately ill and leaning to violence?

"Part of the problem . . . is that people are shut off from each other and not involved," Ottenberg said. "The families or friends don't know what to do. So they tend to ignore the signals, cover up, deny the tough problem — until, of course, the blow-up occurs."

He also stressed the sexual problems Berkowitz described to police. "I think it was very obvious about the sexual problems," Ottenberg said. "This man picked courting couples, people in cars. He apparently resented them very much. And he obviously didn't know how to have pleasure. This is very common in violent persons."

OTTENBERG, WHO HAS studied violence for 20 years, said, "Tenderness and love and the ability to make love require a little bit of assertiveness and a little mastery over aggression.

"The ability to love keeps violence in control," he said. "People who kill like this don't have the ability to love."

Can Son of Sam get well?

"If this person was extremely wealthy, he might get expensive treatment over the years and get a new identity," Ottenberg said.

"It could take five to 20 years. It might take several hundred thousand dollars to treat someone like Son of Sam. What happens has to do with society's priorities."

Probation study urges release of Sam suspect

NEW YORK (UPI) — A pretrial probation report on David Berkowitz after he was arrested and charged as the "Son of Sam" murderer last week recommended that he be freed without bail pending trial, it was disclosed Thursday.

The report, by the Pretrial Services Agency, was obtained and released to reporters by Mayor Abraham Beame, who said he was "infuriated" when he learned of the recommendation.

Despite the report, Brooklyn administrative judge Richard Brown ordered Berkowitz held without bail for psychiatric examination, and the suspected .44-caliber killer, believed responsible for the ambush slayings of six persons in the past year, has been under 24-hour-a-day guard since his arrest.

THE PRE-TRIAL Services Agency, an independent organization receiving city and federal funds, made its recommendation that the suspected .44-caliber killer be freed on his own recognizance based on Berkowitz' "community ties," his lack of a previous criminal record and the fact that there were no arrest warrants outstanding against him.

The report noted, however, that the "community ties" were "non-verified."

The report, apparently based on information provided by Berkowitz in an interview, noted that he had worked for six months at the Bronx General Post Office and had lived for 1½ months at his apartment in Yonkers, N.Y.

Carter job plans 'disappoint' King

Coretta Scott King said Thursday she has been disappointed with President Carter's inability to reduce high unemployment, which she described as "nothing less than repeal of the Civil Rights Act." Mrs. King voiced her criticism at a news conference outlining plans for a "full employment week," Sept. 4-10. She said she believes the scheduled activities — marches, rallies, vigils, petition drives — will put pressure on the administration to support full employment legislation.

Bus hijacker releases hostages

A former mental patient who hijacked a city bus and held 63 hostages for five hours in a religious retreat released his captives unharmed and then surrendered without a fight due greatly to some subtle negotiating, an officer said Thursday. At no time did a team of Santa Cruz sheriff's deputies and a city policeman chosen specially for the task ask Thomas Benton Wilson, 26, a former mental patient from Bakersfield, Calif., to surrender, sheriff's department Sgt. Michael Aluffi said. Wilson, a slight, soft-featured man wearing spectacles and armed with a sawed off .22-caliber rifle, released his hostages in stages from the Baha'i Center, a mountain retreat 15 miles north of Santa Cruz. The center is for members of the Baha'i World faith, a modern religion founded in Iran which espouses social equality.

Bill against gay marriage signed

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. Thursday signed a bill banning marriages between homosexuals. The new law requires county clergs to deny marriage licenses to homosexual couples. The measure was sought by the County Clerks Assn., which cited confusion from a change in law several years ago that removed a designation of brides and grooms as female and male and substituted the word "persons."

Turncoat CIA agent Philip Agee, who once wrote a book naming nearly 250 collaborators of the U.S. spy agency, was expelled from France Thursday and arrived in Belgium just 10 weeks after he was kicked out of Britain. The Social Service Agency for Foreigners said Agee arrived in Tournai on a train from Lille, France. The French Interior Ministry said it expelled Agee because his activities might harm relations with "friendly countries."

Carter sends message to Israel

President Carter Thursday sent a letter to Prime Minister Menahem Begin expressing U.S. concern at Israel's decision to open three new settlements on the West Bank of Jordan, diplomatic sources said. An U.S. Embassy spokesman would confirm only that Ambassador Samuel Lewis delivered a personal message from Carter. But other officials said it reiterated the opposition to the new settlements expressed earlier by the State Dept. Carter's letter was his second to Begin this week. The first asked Israel to act moderately in southern Lebanon, where the army is supplying artillery support to Christian Lebanese troops.

Retirement law to change?

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK—Congress is close to making a decision of extra-ordinary social and financial meaning to all. Yet there has been so little public debate you may not even be aware it is happening. The issue is mandatory job retirement. There is strong bipartisan support in Congress to raise the mandatory retirement age or eliminate it.

The implications are enormous.

• If older people hold their jobs longer, it means slower job advancement for younger people. When the change is first made, it will probably result in fewer job openings. Is this what we really want at a time of high unemployment, when the big post-World War II baby generation must be absorbed into the work force?

• But, is it fair to make older people clear out for the young? Shouldn't retirement be an individual rather than an institutional decision? Isn't it society's loss when good and experienced people, who want to go on working, are arbitrarily kicked out?

• Mandatory retirement has been a way of removing older employes of low competence, whom management has been unable or unwilling to fire. Will removal of this automatic boot add significantly to the number of unproductive workers on the payroll? This applies particularly to the government sector, where it is extremely difficult to fire a civil service worker.

• Will raising the mandatory retirement age force some workers to stay on the job longer than they want? John Martin of the American Assn. of Retired Persons said he estimates, only about 10 per cent of workers over 65 really want to continue on the job.

There is little doubt that sometime during the next 15 or 20 years it will become essential to raise the retirement age. As the baby boom generation works its way into the economy, business and industry gradually expand to employ them. But the next generation is much smaller. Who will operate the machines if the baby-boom bunch retires on schedule?

THE CONDITION of the Social Security System is another good reason to postpone retirement. As the population ages, there will be more people drawing money from Social Security, but fewer people paying into it. The only way to continue social insurance in its present form, without taxing younger workers into revolt, will be to raise the age at which people can begin collecting benefits. Commerce Sec. Juanita Kreps recently suggested raising to age 68 both the mandatory retirement age and the age at which full Social Security benefits begin.

From an economic point of view, it is too early for these things to happen. We are still struggling with youth unemployment. More jobs for older people are the next phase.

But those who want to continue working are in no mood for delay. Fair treatment of older people, they say, should not have to wait on economic convenience.

At the moment, it seems that the wait will not be long. The House Education and Labor Committee has approved legislation prohibiting job discrimination up to age 70.

A companion bill in the Senate would phase out all mandatory retirement by 1985. Yet another bill plugs the loophole in the present age discrimination law that has enabled employers to force many workers into retirement earlier than age 65.

The right to work to a later age has almost been won.

Anacin-Tylenol ads banned

A U.S. District Court judge Thursday barred the makers of the pain reliever Anacin from advertising the product as superior to its chief market competition, Tylenol. Judge Charles E. Stewart Jr. said the American Home Products Corp., which manufactures Anacin, "has made false representations" in comparisons of its product with Tylenol in television and print ads. The non-aspirin Tylenol, produced by McNeil Laboratories, last year surpassed in tablet sales Anacin, still the largest selling aspirin compound, according to the court decision.

B&D trimmers recalled

Some 40,000 weed and grass trimmers manufactured by Black and Decker are being voluntarily recalled because of potentially hazardous electrical shocks, the Consumer Product Safety commission announced. The grass trimmer, No. 8209 Type 1 weed and grass trimmer, had a suggested retail price of $59.99, the agency said.

19-month low plagues market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks fell to a 19-month low Thursday when an early bargain hunting rally collapsed in the wake of unfavorable developments involving IBM and other glamors. Trading was active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up more than six points early in the day, fell 0.43 points to 864.26, the lowest level since it finished at 858.71 on Jan. 2, 1976.

A 4.59-point loser Wednesday, the Dow has lost 140 points so far this year, including 60 since July 22 and 17.59 last week. Those losses created bargain-hunting opportunities that helped the market early in the day.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock exchange index slipped 0.03 to 53.48 and the average price of a common share dipped one cent.

Declines edged advances, 688 to 655, among the 1,846 issues crossing the composite tape at 5 p.m.

Heavy selling began after a federal court in San Francisco ruled an IBM monopoly case should go to trial and a Canadian judge ruled the computer giant must remove IBM copiers from the country.

College-bound learn tips

'Be prepared' is prof's teaching

by ANNA MADRZYK

The alarm clock rings and the class jumps to its feet. "There's no substitute for daily preparation," the 85 young adults recite.

And that's exactly what Purdue University Professor James Blackwell would like them to do every day of their college careers. When the morning wakeup bell rings, it's time to start thinking about the day's studies.

"There's no substitute for daily preparation" is the motto of a course on how to study in college, developed by two Purdue University Professors and recently taught by Blackwell at Buehler YMCA, Palatine.

THE PURPOSE is to let the college-bound student in on what most students learn by trial and error — and to increase his chances of success in school.

Statistics indicate only 40 per cent of entering students will graduate with their class, Blackwell said. When he surveyed the group taking the Buehler course, more than half said they thought their biggest problem in college would be studying.

Blackwell has tips not only on studying, but on topics including budgeting time, taking lecture notes and participating in outside activities.

Daily preparation is the key.

"The college student's week should begin late Sunday afternoon or early Sunday evening. That's when a student should set aside an hour for planning the week's schedule," Blackwell said.

THE STUDENT should estimate how much time is needed to study for all his courses and to complete the week's assignments.

Then he should schedule his studying in one-hour periods around his class time, Blackwell recommends. The schedule should be specific, such as "study history," not just "study."

If a student misses a study period, he must make it up later that week, Blackwell said.

For lecture courses, Blackwell suggests students schedule the study period as soon as possible after the class. For classes in which participation is required, the study time should be before the class meeting.

BLACKWELL GOES by the rule-of-thumb for studying in college: two hours of studying for one hour in class. A student carrying 15 credit hours would spend 30 hours a week studying.

That may not be how most college graduates remember it, but Blackwell thinks it's necessary.

That rule-of-thumb should give students enough time for completing projects and papers as well, he said.

For the first-year dormitory resident faced with noisy evening hours, Blackwell recommends taking advantage of the quiet in the dorm during the day for studying and to study in the library at night.

"You have to learn to live with people and get your studying done, too," Blackwell said.

FOR MANY students, college will be the first experience with a completely lecture class.

The Purdue course teaches a two-thirds, one-third notetaking method.

The lecture outline should cover two-thirds of the notebook page. On one-third, the student should jot down his impressions and instructor emphasis.

During the study periods, Blackwell recommends a process of reading, reciting, writing down and review.

ALL THIS preparation should make it a lot easier when it comes time for exams, Blackwell said. "We emphasize that if the student stays up-to-date, finals aren't so bad."

He adds, "It's ridiculous to stay up all night cramming for exams. They're not going to learn it that way."

Exams should include not only preparation and taking the exam, but also evaluation after the exam, Blackwell said.

Blackwell, however, also believes college should be fun — only not at the expense of studying.

Blackwell cautions students not to get over-involved in extracurricular activities, at least during the first semester.

INSTEAD, HE suggests working on one-shot projects like a dorm dance because "when it's over, you're through with it. You can see the time it took, and if your studies suffered, and then take on more or back off."

He also recommends students not work, but knows one out of two to three students will. There's time to work, he said, but it's recreation time, not study time, which must go.

He would suggest, however, that students try not to work the first year in school, and working on-campus may help save time:

The first-time college student has to make two major adjustments — social and academic, Blackwell said.

"There's the adjustment of living away from home, adjusting to a roommate, handling your own finances and making your own decisions," Blackwell said.

ACADEMICALLY, THE student must learn to be on his own and handle a much greater quantity of material.

In his years teaching the how-to-study course, Blackwell has noted a change in student attitudes.

"Students today seem to be very serious and job-oriented. People recognize they have to do well in college," Blackwell said, adding a competitive job market may be the reason.

The students who took the course at Buehler came from 20 area high schools and indicated they were going into 40 different fields of study at 42 colleges and universities from California to Boston. This is unusually scattered, Blackwell said.

The largest number, 15 per cent, said they will attend Harper Community College.

Carter urged to clear name of Booth's doctor

Twenty-eight members of Congress urged President Carter Thursday to reverse the 112-year-old conspiracy conviction of Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd, the man who treated John Wilkes Booth, assassin of President Abraham Lincoln.

The group, led by Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., and Ill. Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th, asked Carter to use his authority as commander-in-chief to declare "null and void" Mudd's conviction by a military commission.

"The general consensus among Lincoln historians is that Dr. Mudd was innocent of any wrongdoing, although he was a Southern sympathizer," Simon said Thursday.

"He simply set Booth's broken leg. But in the hyseria of the times he was tried before a military tribunal — even though he was a civilian — and imprisoned," he said.

THE CONGRESSMEN told Carter that Dr. Mudd received cruel treatment while waiting for trial. "He was chained, his eyes and ears were packed with cotton, and his head covered with a heavy canvas bag," they said.

Simon said the lawmakers were contacted by Dr. Richard Mudd, a 76-year-old semiretired physician who is Dr. Samuel Mudd's grandson.

"The family understandably would like to get its name cleared," Simon said, explaining that the expression "you're name is mud" grew out of Dr. Mudd's trial.

"All the Mudds are a little sensitive to the phrase," he said.

DR. RICHARD MUDD, who lives in Saginaw, Mich., said this is the second such direct appeal to a President. Lyndon Johnson denied a similar request, he said, based on a recommendation by the Army.

"It's very difficult to know what the President will do. His legal advisers will have a lot to say," Dr. Mudd said, noting that Carter is a Southerner."

Seven states — Florida, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Oregon have passed resolutions asking for a reversal.

Dr. Mudd was tried with Booth's accomplices and sentenced to life imprisonment in Ft. Jefferson at Dry Tortugas, Fla. He was eventually pardoned in 1869 by President Andrew Johnson after he helped fight a prison epidemic of yellow fever.

"A pardon indicates guilt. We'd like to have the Mudd named cleared a bit," said Dr. Richard Mudd.

SIMON SAID that while some members of the public might consider the letter to Carter "frivolous," it is "part of the function of legislators to worry about history."

He discounted any political liability attached to a Congressman from Illinois, "The Land of Lincoln," advocating for Dr. Mudd's cause.

In their letter to Carter, the congressmen said Dr. Mudd treated Booth's leg "as any doctor would treat anyone who was suffering" and noted Booth was wearing a disguise. Mudd notified authorities he had treated a stranger who might have been the assassin and eight days later was arrested.

College-bound learn tips

'Be prepared' is prof's teaching

by ANNA MADRZYK

The alarm clock rings and the class jumps to its feet. "There's no substitute for daily preparation," the 85 young adults recite.

And that's exactly what Purdue University Professor James Blackwell would like them to do every day of their college careers. When the morning wakeup bell rings, it's time to start thinking about the day's studies.

"There's no substitute for daily preparation" is the motto of a course on how to study in college, developed by two Purdue University Professors and recently taught by Blackwell at Buehler YMCA, Palatine.

THE PURPOSE is to let the college-bound student in on what most students learn by trial and error — and to increase his chances of success in school.

Statistics indicate only 40 per cent of entering students will graduate with their class, Blackwell said. When he surveyed the group taking the Buehler course, more than half said they thought their biggest problem in college would be studying.

Blackwell has tips not only on studying, but on topics including budgeting time, taking lecture notes and participating in outside activities.

Daily preparation is the key.

"The college student's week should begin late Sunday afternoon or early Sunday evening. That's when a student should set aside an hour for planning the week's schedule," Blackwell said.

THE STUDENT should estimate how much time is needed to study for all his courses and to complete the week's assignments.

Then he should schedule his studying in one-hour periods around his class time, Blackwell recommends. The schedule should be specific, such as "study history," not just "study."

If a student misses a study period, he must make it up later that week, Blackwell said.

For lecture courses, Blackwell suggests students schedule the study period as soon as possible after the class. For classes in which participation is required, the study time should be before the class meeting.

BLACKWELL GOES by the rule-of-thumb for studying in college: two hours of studying for one hour in class. A student carrying 15 credit hours would spend 30 hours a week studying.

That may not be how most college graduates remember it, but Blackwell thinks it's necessary.

That rule-of-thumb should give students enough time for completing projects and papers as well, he said.

For the first-year dormitory resident faced with noisy evening hours, Blackwell recommends taking advantage of the quiet in the dorm during the day for studying and to study in the library at night.

"You have to learn to live with people and get your studying done, too," Blackwell said.

FOR MANY students, college will be the first experience with a completely lecture class.

The Purdue course teaches a two-thirds, one-third notetaking method.

The lecture outline should cover two-thirds of the notebook page. On one-third, the student should jot down his impressions and instructor emphasis.

During the study periods, Blackwell recommends a process of reading, reciting, writing down and review.

ALL THIS preparation should make it a lot easier when it comes time for exams, Blackwell said. "We emphasize that if the student stays up-to-date, finals aren't so bad."

He adds, "It's ridiculous to stay up all night cramming for exams. They're not going to learn it that way."

Exams should include not only preparation and taking the exam, but also evaluation after the exam, Blackwell said.

Blackwell, however, also believes college should be fun — only not at the expense of studying.

Blackwell cautions students not to get over-involved in extracurricular activities, at least during the first semester.

INSTEAD, HE suggests working on one-shot projects like a dorm dance because "when it's over, you're through with it. You can see the time it took, and if your studies suffered, and then take on more or back off."

He also recommends students not work, but knows one out of two to three students will. There's time to work, he said, but it's recreation time, not study time, which must go.

He would suggest, however, that students try not to work the first year in school, and working on-campus may help save time.

The first-time college student has to make two major adjustments — social and academic, Blackwell said.

"There's the adjustment of living away from home, adjusting to a roommate, handling your own finances and making your own decisions," Blackwell said.

ACADEMICALLY, THE student must learn to be on his own and handle a much greater quantity of material.

In his years teaching the how-to-study course, Blackwell has noted a change in student attitudes.

"Students today seem to be very serious and job-oriented. People recognize they have to do well in college," Blackwell said, adding a competitive job market may be the reason.

The students who took the course at Buehler came from 20 area high schools and indicated they were going into 40 different fields of study at 42 colleges and universities from California to Boston. This is unusually scattered, Blackwell said.

The largest number, 15 per cent, said they will attend Harper Community College.

Carter urged to clear name of Booth's doctor

Twenty-eight members of Congress urged President Carter Thursday to reverse the 112-year-old conspiracy conviction of Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd, the man who treated John Wilkes Booth, assassin of President Abraham Lincoln.

The group, led by Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., and Ill. Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th, asked Carter to use his authority as commander-in-chief to declare "null and void" Mudd's conviction by a military commission.

"The general consensus among Lincoln historians is that Dr. Mudd was innocent of any wrongdoing, although he was a Southern sympathizer," Simon said Thursday.

"He simply set Booth's broken leg. But in the hyseria of the times he was tried before a military tribunal — even though he was a civilian — and imprisoned," he said.

THE CONGRESSMEN told Carter that Dr. Mudd received cruel treatment while waiting for trial. "He was chained, his eyes and ears were packed with cotton, and his head covered with a heavy canvas bag," they said.

Simon said the lawmakers were contacted by Dr. Richard Mudd, a 76-year-old semiretired physician who is Dr. Samuel Mudd's grandson.

"The family understandably would like to get its name cleared," Simon said, explaining that the expression "you're name is mud" grew out of Dr. Mudd's trial.

"All the Mudds are a little sensitive to the phrase," he said.

DR. RICHARD MUDD, who lives in Saginaw, Mich., said this is the second such direct appeal to a President. Lyndon Johnson denied a similar request, he said, based on a recommendation by the Army.

"It's very difficult to know what the President will do. His legal advisers will have a lot to say," Dr. Mudd said, noting that Carter is a Southerner."

Seven states — Florida, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Oregon have passed resolutions asking for a reversal.

Dr. Mudd was tried with Booth's accomplices and sentenced to life imprisonment in Ft. Jefferson at Dry Tortugas, Fla. He was eventually pardoned in 1869 by President Andrew Johnson after he helped fight a prison epidemic of yellow fever.

"A pardon indicates guilt. We'd like to have the Mudd named cleared a bit," said Dr. Richard Mudd.

SIMON SAID that while some members of the public might consider the letter to Carter "frivolous," it is "part of the function of legislators to worry about history."

He discounted any political liability attached to a Congressman from Illinois, "The Land of Lincoln," advocating for Dr. Mudd's cause.

In their letter to Carter, the congressmen said Dr. Mudd treated Booth's leg "as any doctor would treat anyone who was suffering" and noted Booth was wearing a disguise. Mudd notified authorities he had treated a stranger who might have been the assassin and eight days later was arrested.

Unknown young actress blooms in 'Rose Garden'

Though she's no longer in training, gymnastics will remain very much a part of Kathleen's life. "I've gained self-confidence through athletics."

The seven-week shooting schedule for "I Never Promised You A Rose Garden" was very demanding. "I'd always want to go out and have dinner but invariably I'd fall asleep at the table. But it was a great feeling."

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Kathleen Quinlan was only 12 years old when Joanne Greenberg's experiences about her schizophrenic flight into a fantasy-filled, demonized world became the instant best seller "I Never Promised You A Rose Garden."

It seemed a natural for a film, but problems kept surfacing and the movie was continually postponed, once even after shooting had begun.

Luckily for Kathleen the problems added up until at age 21 she got her first crack at not only a major role, but a dramatically challenging one. Other stars, their careers already well established, bid for the role of a 16-year-old mentally disturbed girl with suicidal tendancies. But Kathleen got it.

PRODUCER ROBERT CORMAN gambled—as he is noted for doing with unknowns—and came up a winner with the picture and with Kathleen. Another so-called unknown he once helped out was Jack Nicholson.

Critics have generally reacted favorably to "Rose Garden," released last Friday, even those who dare to criticize the film still rave about Quinlan's performance.

Kathleen, now 22, is excited about her overnight success but not gushy. She doesn't know what's going to happen, except she assumes she won't want for roles. Even in the past, however, she has accepted only those parts she thought would benefit her as an actress.

That included a non-speaking role in "American Graffiti" and one in which she did get to talk in "Lifeguard."

"I was eight pounds heavier then and I really looked kinda pudgy. The role in 'Lifeguard' was like me after I first came to Los Angeles. I do like to swim in the ocean."

THAT'S PARTLY because in school Kathleen competed in gymnastics and high diving. In fact, if the small college she attended hadn't canceled a course she needed to teach recreation, she might not have left northern California.

"Gymnastics is all well and good, but when you get to making a living for yourself and get out into the world, it doesn't cut it," she said.

Kathleen was given an opportunity to read for the lead in "Rose Garden" based on a screen test. She was told to prepare four scenes and she stayed up all night preparing the whole script—just in case.

"Just being given a chance to read was celebration enough. I read with Anthony Page (the director) for four hours straight. I had no idea where it was going.

"I looked upon the reading as an acting exercise—like an athlete in a workout," said Kathleen. "I considered the director like my athletic coach. I came out feeling charged. If I didn't get the part it was still a good reading."

Kathleen said she saw things in the film when she relax with friends.

"MY MANAGER CALLED and said I had to come back, that they wanted me to read again. I honestly didn't want to go back. I didn't have anything left to give. I hadn't saved a thing in my hip pocket."

Kathleen said she saw things in the film whtn she watched it for the first time, that she didn't even know were coming across while making it.

"It was really pleasant to be surprised. After seeing the second work cut I was so disappointed. I didn't know where it was heading. It's the kind of story that really could have been exploited if they had wanted to."

"Rose Garden" was shot in seven weeks, with many scenes filmed on an actual ward of a mental institute. One scene Kathleen recalls very well. Consciously trying to hurt herself, Deborah, the character Kathleen plays, bangs her head on the floor until she passes out. Kathleen had to be careful. The only thing separating her from the floor was a two-inch square piece of sponge.

"I KEPT THINKING, where would somebody have to be in her mind to do something like that," said Kathleen.

The young actress has never met the author, Joanne Greenberg, but she talked to her once over the phone.

"She was really excited—who I was, where I came from, what it was like to do a film like this."

When she returns to California, Kathleen will head out to her favorite place — the beach. And then consider the projects her manager has been lining up.

"Nothing's changed," she said about her success. "I'm still the one making the choices."

And she admits she'd like to play all different kinds of roles. She had just seen "One on One," a new sports movie, and it made her think that someday she'd enjoy playing an athlete.

"I think I could do that very easily," she said. "And I guess I'd like to play an actress sometime."

Gymnastics or acting, she doesn't lack experience in either one.

Disco on wheels

Let all the music come to you

RIGHT NOW it's more a part-time hobby than a fulltime business, but Chuck Weissmueller thinks there is great potential for traveling discos in the Northwest suburbs. Often he plays at apartment complexes like The Colony in Mount Prospect, above. "The only thing going against me is the pure tradition of having a band," said Chuck.

Chuck Weissmueller is to disco freaks what made-for-television movies are to film buffs — easy and convenient. You sit still. They come to you.

Chuck packs up his stereo equipment — a complete sound system with speakers, mixer, turntables and tape — and goes where the party is. He's played for weddings and anniversaries, in rec centers and poolside at apartment complexes, and once he was even invited to sail on Lake Michigan. He spun records on a 35-foot yacht.

Chuck is his own disc jockey and he carries a complete library of music ranging from disco, pop and rock to country and western and even swing. All you have to do is name your tune.

CHUCK CALLS his business Discotheque-On-Wheels and he thinks he's in a unique position — able to duplicate the quality sound of a recording studio while undercutting the cost of live entertainment.

Not only can he substitute for a four or five-piece combo; Chuck feels he can provide a better range of music, everything from Barbra Streisand to the Doobie Brothers, from Glenn Miller to Dolly Parton. He owns more than 500 LPs.

Discotheque-On-Wheels is less than a year old. It's growing mostly by word of mouth.

The 25-year-old Mount Prospect resident started spinning records for Some Other Place in Glenview when he couldn't find a job in his field. He got the idea for a traveling disco when friends kept asking him to come over with his records. They needed cheap but good party entertainment.

Chuck rented a van, invested in stereo equipment and started going on location.

AND HE AIMS to please. Just recently he added a multi colored lighting system to lend even more of a discotheque atmosphere, and if his guests want to learn the latest dances or maybe back up to the fox trot, he'll even provide a dance instructor.

Sci-fi soars soon after 'Star Wars'

by DAVID STERRITT

In Hollywood studios, New York offices and movie houses across North America, executives and fans alike are riding a new cinematic tidal wave. Science fiction lives!

It all began when "Star Wars" became an instant "zowie" — that's the highest word of praise bestowed by Variety, the box-office-conscious journal of show biz. And almost instantly the success spread.

Twentieth Century-Fox soared on the New York Stock Exchange, and other studios seemed almost equally delighted at Fox's smash hit. A summer season glutted with 14 big-budget films — totaling nearly $130 million in production costs — needed a spark to remind audiences that there is more to life than television.

"Star Wars" did the trick. Together with "The Deep" from Columbia, it led the movie industry to new box-office records, and proved that expensive fantasies can still coax viewers into spending time and energy for a visit to the wide screen.

IT HAS ALSO spotlighted a mass migration to Hollywood of experts in such technological fields as electronics and microcircuitry. They have found new demand for their skills and imaginations in studios facing special-effect problems not dreamed of in the past. Even the owner of New York's Science Fiction Shop is said to have sold his store and headed West to help fill the demand for new scripts.

Always looking for a star to hitch its bandwagon to, Hollywood has wasted no time before announcing a parade of entries in the new sweepstakes. Some were in the works long before "Star Wars" opened, perhaps indicating that a miniflurry of sci-fi spectacles was inevitable.

Chief among these is Columbia's "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," a lavish drama by Steven ("Jaws") Spielberg about an ordinary man who gets entangled with unidentified flying objects Budgeted at more than $20 million, with long special-effects sequences to contrast with its earthbound setting, it is slated for pre-Christmas release in the United States.

ANOTHER MAJOR effort well under way is "Superman," actually a pair of pictures with a price tag that could hit $30 million. Filmmaker Richard ("The Omen") Donner calls it a "family movie" with a feeling of "old-fashioned Americanism." The stars include Marlon Brando, Gene Hackman, Valerie Perrine, and Margot Kidder as Lois Lane. The first third of the epic will detail the original Superman myth, and new adventures will grow from there.

Director Donner expects the finished product to have many times the special effects needed for "Star Wars," and suggests that his are more complicated, since they involve people rather than machines.

"Star Wars" itself will have at least one sequel — you may have noticed that the villainous Lord Darth Vader remained alive though temporarily vanquished at the end — with filmmaker George Lucas serving as executive producer rather than director. And although the premiere of "Close Encounters" is still months away,

Still in 007 bondage, Roger Moore objects to passing up other roles

by VERNON SCOTT

Roger Moore has completed the ultimate 007 movie and is undecided if he will remain in Bondage for yet another go-round as the secret agent licensed by the Crown to kill.

In fact, after "The Spy Who Loved Me" there may be no bad guys left to dispatch.

Moore appears to wipe out half the earth's population in the best and most spectacular, most expensive of the 10 James Bond films to date.

Negotiations between Moore and producer Albert (Cubby) Broccoli have broken off. If not resumed, Broccoli perforce would find himself a fourth actor to assay the role of the British Secret Service hit man.

Moore's predecessors were Sean Connery, who starred in six Bond films, and George Lazenby, who played the role only once.

Suave, sophisticated and altogether a model of English wit, Moore is not one to cavil over mere money. He is holding out against doing the next 007 epic, "For Your Eyes Only," because there is no fixed starting date.

HE EXPLAINED that in his three Bond films — the first two were "Live and Let Die" and "The Man With the Golden Gun" — he was at a loss to know when they would start and when they would end.

"It's all up in the air," he said, flourishing a horribly pungent cigar. "I don't mind doing more Bond films. All I want is a guarantee of dates.

"I can't afford to pass up other work while waiting around for Bond pictures. I didn't work for 16 months awaiting word on when this last one would begin.

"Once we do start, it is a matter of devoting five or six months of my life to a single film. That's a long time and I'm not getting any younger.

"We worked seven days a week most of the time. And there were more locations for this picture than any of the others. They shot in Egypt, England, Scotland, Sardinia, Malta, the Bahamas, the Arctic Circle, Switzerland and Okinawa."

BOND PICTURES also take their physical toll. Moore is resigned to living with aching muscles, contusions and an occasional concussion during production.

"I spend a great deal of time bruised, and sometimes a little bloody, but fortunately with nothing broken," he said, exhaling a cloud of cigar smoke. "I suspected I wouldn't live through the first one.

"Broccoli wasn't sure I would survive or he wouldn't have paid the enormous insurance premiums on my life.

"I'm overwritten at Lloyds of London. Everyone connected with the pictures takes out insurance on me. For the first two weeks they hope to kill me so they can collect the insurance and make a profit."

James Bond films are an actor's insurance policies against dying broke. Moore is well aware they are the most successful series of top budgeted films in movie history.

Roger Moore

"Bond movies are the longest string of any grade A series. Unlike Andy Hardy or Sherlock Holmes or the Frankenstein horror films, which were inexpensive fillers, they are major individual productions which stand on their own.

"THEY HAVE A tremendous audience and seem to improve at the box office with every new film.

"I'm sure people came to my first Bond picture to see if I could carry on from Sean Connery. The second time they came to see if I would maintain the level of mediocrity I established. This time out I believe people are curious about whether I've improved at all."

Moore enjoys putting himself down, perhaps defensively, thereby beating anyone else to the punch.

He brings a great deal of his own personality to his Bond characterization. Connery played the role warily deadpanned. Lazenby gave is an Errol Flynn approach. Moore portrays 007 with gleeful irreverence.

"I couldn't do Bond straight," he said. "He's high camp and has got to be played tongue-in-cheek. The premise of the villian in 'The Spy Who Loved Me' is so outrageous it can't be taken serious — a man living in splendor beneath the sea, tracking down atomic submarines.

"IT'S A JOKE that must be shared. The audience should laugh with the picture, not at it.

"Ian Fleming didn't write his Bond books for laughs. But they would be the most sadistic, violent movies ever made without the saving grace of humor."

While Moore was fidgeting around waiting for dates on the new picture he missed out on a top role in "A Bridge Too Far" and several other movies. He doesn't intend to repeat the mistake.

He's not afraid of becoming too closely associated with the Bond role. After all, he survived starring parts in five television series, among them "The Alaskans," "Ivanhoe" and "The Saint" (to which he devoted seven years) without being type cast.

"Actually, the Bond films are not all that important to my career," he said. "But I'm not objecting to doing more. Despite all the shot and shell, I enjoy doing them."

(United Press International)

'The Spy Who Loved Me'

Bond's latest adventure played tongue-in-cheek

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Review ★★½

I'm not sure why James Bond flicks continue to be earmarked for box office success with little more substance to sustain them than shallow plots and rampant sexism. But, after nine pictures in 14 years, the formula still works.

And why not? James Bond ventures constitute pure escapism incorporating a little bit of everything moviegoers like — adventure, sex, outlandish violence and, least I forget, a happy ending. The latter is essential so the 007 sequels never dry up.

If James Bond must be an American film tradition, then make more like "The Spy Who Loved Me," the latest one, that offers still another favorite ingredient — humor. In tongue-in-cheek fashion, this latest round of 007 tomfoolery is a parody of everything that has gone before it.

YES, WE ARE pulling you let, it says, and we want you to laugh along with us. Humor, coupled with special effects and scenic, on-location filming, makes for a fantasy-filled, comic book adventure.

The fun starts right off with James Bond (Roger Moore) on skis, eluding three killers by sailing off a cliff in the Austrian Alps and gliding through the air until, by releasing a parachute, he lands softly in a snowdrift.

That's only the beginning. There are all kinds of special tricks befitting the invincible agent, including an amphibious car equipped with bullets, bombs, special sprays and other imaginative deterrents.

The screenplay by Christopher Wood and veteran Bond adaptor Richard Maibaum is an original script and has nothing to do with the Fleming book. Only the title has been retained. But that really shouldn't bother anyone.

Curt Jurgens is a nasty, wicked villain who lives under the sea in a self-contained, lavishly furnished paradise. He plans to destroy the world above by sabotaging American and Russian nuclear subs in hopes of setting off World War III.

RUSSIA AND THE U.S. combine forces, and this time Moore works as a team with beautiful Russian agent Barbara Bach, who lends a little mystery to the role by not falling into Moore's arms right away. Naturally, however, Bach is not the only beautiful woman in the picture.

James Bond is the only character alive who emerges from battles with trucks, helicopters and giant henchmen with nary a scratch nor rip in his tuxedo.

But even staunch Sean Connery fans cannot nit-pick Moore's performance, whose treatment of the role is one of cool detachment.

Director Lewis Gilbert keeps "The Spy Who Loved Me" on an even pace with just enough gimmickry and self-mockery to keep things laughable. That includes incorporating "Lawrence of Arabia" and "Dr. Zhivago" music.

Yet, best of all is Richard Kiel as a seven-foot henchman nicknamed "Jaws," because of his calling card — a mouthful of razor-sharp stainless steel teeth. He's mean and stupid and continually foiled by Bond. But nothing stops him — not even a shark.

JAWS IS TOO good to kill off and no doubt we'll be seeing him again in the next James Bond thriller that has already been annnounced, "For Your Eyes Only."

The latest sports movie, "One on One," is reviewed by Bob Frisk in Sports.

Movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments. Films reviewed by Genie Campbell are rated excellent, four stars; good, three stars; fair, two stars; and poor, one star.

"MacArthur" — Gregory Peck puts in a lot of hard work as the controversial general who swore he would return, but this byggraphy of MacArthur's later years is too talky and ponderously structured to make a great general movie like "Patton." (PG). ★★½

"Other Side of Midnight" — Sidney Sheldon's globe-hopping novel, a giant bestseller, about rags-to-riches characters and love lost and love regained at any cost, transferred to the screen as an opulently mounted tearjerker. (PG). ★★½

"New York, New York" — He is a selfish saxophone player, she is a bright young singer in the big band era immediately following World War II. It is an ill-fated love story but director Martin Scorcese rarely allows the jazz-driven pace to falter. Great performances by Robert De Niro and Liza Minnelli among cardboard sets and golden glows that evoke the fashions and mood of the 1940s. ★★★

"Star Wars" — Director George Lucas ("American Graffiti") pulled out all stops in mounting this space fantasy about intergalactic warfare, and the dazzling filmmaking, technical wizardry and rousing adventure make for one of the most spectacular entertainments of this or any other year. Not a heavy, heady "2001" trip, it aims to entertain, and the sky is the limit. (PG). ★★★★

"Smokey and the Bandit" — Burt Reynolds, along with trucker sidekick Jerry Reed, hauls 400 cases of bootleg beer across state lines and romances run-away bride-to-be Sally Field while lawman Jackie Gleason and his jilted son follow in hot pursuit. Slim storyline, but the raucous road action makes for great summer entertainment. (PG) ★★½

"The Last Remake of Beau Geste" — Marty Feldman directed and co-wrote this wildly uneven but funny send-up of Hollywood's Foreign Legion sagas. Essentially a string of gags and set pieces in the Mel Brooks vein, the film starts marvelously, but progressively loses steam. (PG). ★★½

Still in 007 bondage, Roger Moore objects to passing up other roles

by VERNON SCOTT

Roger Moore has completed the ultimate 007 movie and is undecided if he will remain in Bondage for yet another go-round as the secret agent licensed by the Crown to kill.

In fact, after "The Spy Who Loved Me" there may be no bad guys left to dispatch.

Moore appears to wipe out half the earth's population in the best and most spectacular, most expensive of the 10 James Bond films to date.

Negotiations between Moore and producer Albert (Cubby) Broccoli have broken off. If not resumed, Broccoli perforce would find himself a fourth actor to assay the role of the British Secret Service hit man.

Moore's predecessors were Sean Connery, who starred in six Bond films, and George Lazenby, who played the role only once.

Suave, sophisticated and altogether a model of English wit, Moore is not one to cavil over mere money. He is holding out against doing the next 007 epic, "For Your Eyes Only," because there is no fixed starting date.

HE EXPLAINED that in his three Bond films — the first two were "Live and Let Die" and "The Man With the Golden Gun" — he was at a loss to know when they would start and when they would end.

"It's all up in the air," he said, flourishing a horribly pungent cigar. "I don't mind doing more Bond films. All I want is a guarantee of dates.

"I can't afford to pass up other work while waiting around for Bond pictures. I didn't work for 16 months awaiting word on when this last one would begin.

"Once we do start, it is a matter of devoting five or six months of my life to a single film. That's a long time and I'm not getting any younger.

"We worked seven days a week most of the time. And there were more locations for this picture than any of the others. They shot in Egypt, England, Scotland, Sardinia, Malta, the Bahamas, the Arctic Circle, Switzerland and Okinawa."

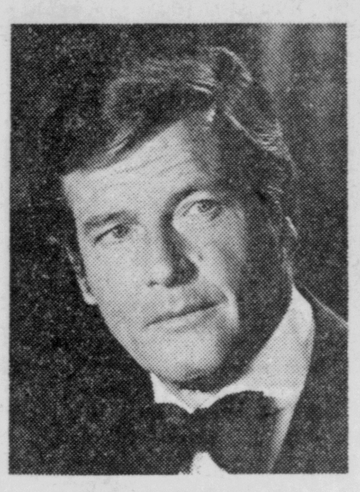
BOND PICTURES also take their physical toll. Moore is resigned to living with aching muscles, contusions and an occasional concussion during production.

"I spend a great deal of time bruised, and sometimes a little bloody, but fortunately with nothing broken," he said, exhaling a cloud of cigar smoke. "I suspected I wouldn't live through the fiirst one.

"Broccoli wasn't sure I would survive or he wouldn't have paid the enormous insurance premiums on my life.

"I'm overwritten at Lloyds of London. Everyone connected with the pictures takes out insurance on me. For the first two weeks they hope to kill me so they can collect the insurance and make a profit."

James Bond films are an actor's insurance policies against dying broke. Moore is well aware they are the most successful series of top budgeted films in movie history.



Roger Moore

"Bond movies are the longest string of any grade A series. Unlike Andy Hardy or Sherlock Holmes or the Frankenstein horror films, which were inexpensive fillers, they are major individual productions which stand on their own.

"THEY HAVE A tremendous audience and seem to improve at the box office with every new film.

"I'm sure people came to my first Bond picture to see if I could carry on from Sean Connery. The second time they came to see if I would maintain the level of mediocrity I established. This time out I believe people are curious about whether I've improved at all."

Moore enjoys putting himself down, perhaps defensively, thereby beating anyone else to the punch.

He brings a great deal of his own personality to his Bond characterization. Connery played the role warily deadpanned. Lazenby gave is an Errol Flynn approach. Moore portrays 007 with gleeful irreverence.

"I couldn't do Bond straight," he said. "He's high camp and has got to be played tongue-in-cheek. The premise of the villian in 'The Spy Who Loved Me' is so outrageous it can't be taken serious — a man living in splendor beneath the sea, tracking down atomic submarines.

"IT'S A JOKE that must be shared. The audience should laugh with the picture, not at it.

"Ian Fleming didn't write his Bond books for laughs. But they would be the most sadistic, violent movies ever made without the saving grace of humor."

While Moore was fidgeting around waiting for dates on the new picture he missed out on a top role in "A Bridge Too Far" and several other movies. He doesn't intend to repeat the mistake.

He's not afraid of becoming too closely associated with the Bond role. After all, he survived starring parts in five television series, among them "The Alaskans," "Ivanhoe" and "The Saint" (to which he devoted seven years) without being type cast.

"Actually, the Bond films are not all that important to my career," he said. "But I'm not objecting to doing more. Despite all the shot and shell, I enjoy doing them."

'The Spy Who Loved Me'

Bond's latest adventure played tongue-in-cheek

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Review ★★½

I'm not sure why James Bond flicks continue to be earmarked for box office success with little more substance to sustain them than shallow plots and rampant sexism. But, after nine pictures in 14 years, the formula still works.

And why not? James Bond ventures constitute pure escapism incorporating a little bit of everything moviegoers like — adventure, sex, outlandish violence and, least I forget, a happy ending. The latter is essential so the 007 sequels never dry up.

If James Bond must be an American film tradition, then make more like "The Spy Who Loved Me," the best one, that offers still another favorite ingredient — humor. In tongue-in-cheek fashion, this latest round of 007 tomfoolery is a parody of everytihing that has gone before it.

YES, WE ARE pulling you let, it says, and we want you to laugh along with us. Humor, coupled with special effects and scenic, on-location filming, makes for a fantasy-filled, comic book adventure.

The fun starts right off with James Bond (Roger Moore) on skis, eluding three killers by sailing off a cliff in the Austrian Alps and gliding through the air until, by releasing a parachute, he lands softly in a snowdrift.

That's only the beginning. There are all kinds of special tricks befitting the invincible agent, including an amphibious car equipped with bullets, bombs, special sprays and other imaginative deterrents.

Crepes 'n waffles spot off to mediocre start

Bill o' fare

When you're hungry for breakfast but you don't want the usual scrambled eggs or pancakes, or when you're looking for an out-of-the-ordinary dining experience, gourmet-style crepes and waffles can provide a delightful change for tired tastebuds.

Unfortunately, the fare at Van's Belgian Crepes and Waffles, 911 W. Higgins Rd., Schaumburg, doesn't measure up to expectations. Although Van's breakfast, dinner and dessert offerings sound delectable, the food, as well as the service, has been inconsistent the two times I've eaten at the restaurant.

Featuring:
Van's Belgian
Crepes and Waffles

On my first visit one recent Sunday afternoon, we were forced to wait a good 45 minutes for our orders to be served, even though the restaurant was only a little more than half filled. Although our waiter was extremely apologetic and solicitous, the wait was inexcusable. But by our second visit on a recent Monday night, the kitchen crew apparently had its act together as we received our food promptly. It is only fair to add that Van's is new, having only opened this summer.

THE FOOD, LIKE the service, varies from good to poor. On my first visit I tried a granola waffle with apples and ice cream, a combination that was delicious but overpriced. I was charged $1.85 for the waffle and apples, plus $1.65 for the ice cream. My friend enjoyed her chocolate mousse crepes, a rich, filling dessert. Our orders of milk were served warm.

On my second visit, I sampled the chicken Creole dinner crepes, $3.95, and my friend tried the crepes stuffed with Chilean lobster tail and covered with a Newburg sauce, $3.50. The stringy, the sauce mediocre. chicken in my crepes was dry and

My friend was equally disappointed. The lobster chunks were tough, and the sauce did not taste like an authentic Newburg sauce.

FOR DESSERT we split a "Betty Boop," $2.25, crepes stuffed with blackberries or strawberries and covered with a light cream cheese topping and sliced almonds — a choice that did prove to be as tasty as its description.

Dessert crepes are priced in the $1.95 to $2.50 range, and dinner crepes cost about $2 more. Eggs, salads, daily soup specials and various waffle combinations also are available. And waffles do seem to be a safe bet.

On the positive side, the restaurant's three dining areas, including one offset with green canopies and another with wood paneling and rustic paintings, are clean and decorative and the service, even when slow, is cheerful. Van's is open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to midnight Friday, 8 a.m. to midnight Saturday and 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday.

Garage sale to benefit Players

In an effort to raise funds to finance the continuation of its Young People's Theatre Series, The Players of Schaumburg Repertory Company will participate on Saturday in a garage sale and flea market sponsored by Schaumburg Jaycees.

To be held at Wiseway Shopping Plaza, 1700 W. Wise Rd., Schaumburg, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., The Players' section of the garage sale will offer everything from toys and plants to TV sets and furniture.

Also available will be tickets and patron subscription passes for The Players' Theatre '77 Series which includes the October production of "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" and "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown" in December.

RAISING FUNDS for its special Young People's Theatre Series has been a major project of the group for the past year since the series' production costs began to substantially exceed its ticket sale income.

Anyone interested in the garage sale project or in making a donation to help finance the Series may call 885-2360 after 4 p.m.

Mystery next VT attraction

A suspenseful murder mystery has been chosen as the next attraction by The Village Theatre Of Arlington Heights. "Ten Little Indians," Agatha Christie's chill-and-shudder melodrama, will open Sept. 9 at Hersey High School.

Crepes 'n waffles spot off to mediocre start

Bill o' fare

When you're hungry for breakfast but you don't want the usual scrambled eggs or pancakes, or when you're looking for an out-of-the-ordinary dining experience, gourmet-style crepes and waffles can provide a delightful change for tired tastebuds.

Unfortunately, the fare at Van's Belgian Crepes and Waffles, 911 W. Higgins Rd., Schaumburg, doesn't measure up to expectations. Although Van's breakfast, dinner and dessert offerings sound delectable, the food, as well as the service, has been inconsistent the two times I've eaten at the restaurant.

Featuring:
Van's Belgian
Crepes and Waffles

On my first visit one recent Sunday afternoon, we were forced to wait a good 45 minutes for our orders to be served, even though the restaurant was only a little more than half filled. Although our waiter was extremely apologetic and solicitous, the wait was inexcusable. But by our second visit on a recent Monday night, the kitchen crew apparently had its act together as we received our food promptly. It is only fair to add that Van's is new, having only opened this summer.

THE FOOD, LIKE the service, varies from good to poor. On my first visit I tried a granola waffle with apples and ice cream, a combination that was delicious but overpriced. I was charged $1.85 for the waffle and apples, plus $1.65 for the ice cream. My friend enjoyed her chocolate mousse crepes, a rich, filling dessert. Our orders of milk were served warm.

On my second visit, I sampled the chicken Creole dinner crepes, $3.95, and my friend tried the crepes stuffed with Chilean lobster tail and covered with a Newburg sauce, $3.50. The stringy, the sauce mediocre. chicken in my crepes was dry and

My friend was equally disappointed. The lobster chunks were tough, and the sauce did not taste like an authentic Newburg sauce.

FOR DESSERT we split a "Betty Boop," $2.25, crepes stuffed with blackberries or strawberries and covered with a light cream cheese topping and sliced almonds — a choice that did prove to be as tasty as its description.

Dessert crepes are priced in the $1.95 to $2.50 range, and dinner crepes cost about $2 more. Eggs, salads, daily soup specials and various waffle combinations also are available. And waffles do seem to be a safe bet.

On the positive side, the restaurant's three dining areas, including one offset with green canopies and another with wood paneling and rustic paintings, are clean and decorative and the service, even when slow, is cheerful. Van's is open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to midnight Friday, 8 a.m. to midnight Saturday and 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday.

Garage sale to benefit Players

In an effort to raise funds to finance the continuation of its Young People's Theatre Series, The Players of Schaumburg Repertory Company will participate on Saturday in a garage sale and flea market sponsored by Schaumburg Jaycees.

To be held at Wiseway Shopping Plaza, 1700 W. Wise Rd., Schaumburg, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., The Players' section of the garage sale will offer everything from toys and plants to TV sets and furniture.

Also available will be tickets and patron subscription passes for The Players' Theatre '77 Series which includes the October production of "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" and "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown" in December.

RAISING FUNDS for its special Young People's Theatre Series has been a major project of the group for the past year since the series' production costs began to substantially exceed its ticket sale income.

Composer Charles Ives gains favor

Bill Gowen
DISCovering classics

It is nice to see the music of Charles Ives finally gaining the acceptance it deserves as evidenced by an increase in performances and recordings by orchestras and chamber groups.

Ives, the son of a Connecticut village bandmaster, is considered by some to be the country's greatest composer. The 1974 centennial of his birth prompted a notable continuing public awareness of his work.

The Boston Symphony has just recorded Ives' Symphony No. 4, only the third time this work has appeared in the catalog. Music Director Seiji Ozawa and his orchestra, along with John Oliver's Tanglewood Festival Chorus, have done a masterful job at re-recreating the mood of the famous premiere recording by Leopold Stokowski and the American Symphony more than a decade ago.

The newer Deutsche Grammophon disc (D 2530 787) has the advantage of the acoustics of Boston's Symphony Hall and that auditorium's pipe organ. Stokowski had a somewhat smaller recording location and had to make do with an electronic organ.

BUT EVEN WITH these advantages Ozawa can't match the sense of spontaneity Stokowski manages with his orchestra. This disc is available as a Columbia single (MS-6775) or as part of the set of all four Ives symphones (Columbia D3S-783). Stokowski is joined by Leonard Bernstein (second and third symphonies) and Eugene Ormandy (first symphony) in that integral set. The New York Philharmonic and Philadelphia Orchestras, respectively, give Bernstein and Ormandy outstanding performances.

Anyone who hasn't heard Ives is missing something; his music is full of the sounds of American life at the turn of the century. The listener can hear the composer's father's village band playing, the spectators chattering, dogs barking and horse-drawn vehicles moving down the street.

Most of his symphonic works contain excerpts from church hymns: "Nearer My God to Thee," "Bringing in the Sheaves," etc. It seems hokey but Ives brings it off. Listen to the Second Symphony and you get a piece of "Camptown Races," "Turkey in the Straw" or one of the composer's favorites, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

MOST OF IVES' works present a slice of American life, and the fourth, with its choral passages, is the most mature of the symphonies in this regard.

Ozawa and the Boston Symphony have caputred the mood well, making this a highly recommended purchase. But remember that Stokowski, in his mid-60s when he made his premiere recording, is tough to match in any league.

Take Stokowski with his small-hall, fresher approach with good recording sonics despite the age of the record (1966). Or, choose the Boston/Ozawa, which has the characteristic "big hall" sound of the famed Symphony Hall and an uncommonly fine performance by conductor and musicians alike.

As a bonus, Ozawa offers as a filler one of Ives' shorter works, "Central Park in the Dark," about eight minutes of what the composer called "a picture-in-sounds of nature and of happenings that men would hear some 30 hears or so ago (before the combustion engine and radio monopolized the earth and air), when sitting on a bench in Central Park on a hot summer night."

THE PROGRAM NOTE is almost longer than the music but it tells the story; a more delightful slice of Americana would be harder to find, unless, of course, it were in other Ives repertory.

If you want a sample, buy Ives' third symphony (subtitled "A Camp Meeting") on Argo with Neville Marriner conducting the Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields.

The symphony's three movements, "Old Folks Gatherin'," "Children's Day" and "Communion," fit the Ives mold perfectly. This is a splendid performance by a smaller orchestra, making the music more intimate than the Bernstein version mentioned above in the full set of Ives symphonies.

Marriner also conducts works by four other American composers on the disc (Argo ZRG-845), including the Aaron Copland "Quiet City" for English horn, trumpet and strings, and the familiar Samuel Barber "Adagio for Strings" from his B minor string quartet.

Joffrey at Ravinia

Troupe skims surface of ballet

by LYNN ASINOF

A lot of people are fond of saying the Joffrey Ballet isn't like other ballet companies.

They're right. That's why a lot of people who would never think of going to see a classical ballet are flocking to see the Joffrey at Ravinia this week.

The Joffrey presents popularized dance. The dancers use all the classical ballet vocabulary, but the dance itself ends up being secondary.

Tuesday's program, for example, was typical of the Joffrey dance diet. In number after number, dancers drifted by in frothy, colorful costumes, but there was nothing substantial to hold on to. Everything looked like it had been pasteurized.

Review

THAT MAKES the Joffrey easy to watch. There is still the excitement of watching sleek, trained bodies move in flashes of color across the stage. But there are no subtleties, no deeper meaning in the movements.

The Joffrey is at its flashy best in upbeat numbers like "Trinity," Gerald Arpino's rock ballet. A loud, brassy celebration of youth in the 1960s, the piece has the feel of a clean-cut Berkeley.

The best part of "Trinity" is Gary Chryst, a dancer who moves with stop-and-go precision. Unlike most Joffrey dancers, Chryst has line and definition, turning even simple movements into clean, succinct statements. The elevation in his effortless jumps allows him time to embroider the fabric of the choreography.

"Pas de Deux Holberg," a modern, white pas de deux by John Cranko, is a new addition to the Joffrey repertory. Denise Jackson and Kevin McKenzie, however, were not up to the intricate, sculptural Cranko choreography.

THE PIECE should have been danced with abandon. Instead it was danced with a cool sense of control.

The most substantial piece of the evening was Jose Limon's "The Moore's Pavane," an abstract version of Othello. The four dancers tell the tragic story by interweaving their bodies with powerful, stylized movements.

The Limon work is a masterpiece, capturing the battle between good and evil with balanced tensions and synchronized movement. The Joffrey version is compelling in spite of itself — bloodless compared to its potential, but effective nonetheless.

Only Chryst as the sinister Iago has the ability to play with the fabric of his role. Beatriz Rodriguez and Jan Hamilford grow into their parts as the ballet develops, but Christian Holder never finds the character of Othello in his large, stilted movements.

"VIVA VIVALDI," a 1965 Arpino standard, was the company's opener. A Spanish-style, romatic number, the piece is full of aerial splits and dramatic leaps.

The mood of the piece was all but shattered by the stage cues accidentally amplified on the sound system. Ann Marie De Angelo stood out in the number as a dancer with both poise and phrasing.

The Joffrey will be at Ravinia through Sunday. Performances begin at 8:30 p.m. every evening with a matinee at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Sci-fi soars

that movie already has inspired various imitators. Variety warns that some quickies will be ready in time to compete with "the big one" this winter.

UNIVERSAL AND Paramount have been working jointly on a major remake of "When Worlds Collide." Meanwhile, one of the happiest men in Hollywood is sci-fi veteran George Pal, whose original 1950s "When Worlds Collide" and "The War of the Worlds" recently have been re-released. Pal himself is said to be riding the new wave with a planned "Return of the Time Machine," to follow up his memorable 1960 hit based on a probing H G. Wells novelette.

The Walt Disney studios are hard at work on "The Cat From Outer Space" and may soon begin "Space Probe "

Recent reports also mention such entries as Sir Lew Grade's "Capricorn One," and "Timescape" from Saul ("Logan's Run" scape'' from Saul ("Logan's Run")
Abraham Polonsky is said to have a script based on Arthur C. Clarke's "Childhood's End" that could see light of day as a result of the new trend.

Joffrey at Ravinia

Troupe skims surface of ballet

by LYNN ASINOF

Review

A lot of people are fond of saying the Joffrey Ballet isn't like other ballet companies.

They're right. That's why a lot of people who would never think of going to see a classical ballet are flocking to see the Joffrey at Ravinia this week.

The Joffrey presents popularized dance. The dancers use all the classical ballet vocabulary, but the dance itself ends up being secondary.

Tuesday's program, for example, was typical of the Joffrey dance diet. In number after number, dancers drifted by in frothy, colorful costumes, but there was nothing substantial to hold on to. Everything looked like it had been pasteurized.

THAT MAKES the Joffrey easy to watch. There is still the excitement of watching sleek, trained bodies move in flashes of color across the stage. But there are no subtleties, no deeper meaning in the movements.

The Joffrey is at its flashy best in upbeat numbers like "Trinity," Gerald Arpino's rock ballet. A loud, brassy celebration of youth in the 1960s, the piece has the feel of a clean-cut Berkeley.

The best part of "Trinity" is Gary Chryst, a dancer who moves with stop-and-go precision. Unlike most Joffrey dancers, Chryst has line and definition, turning even simple movements into clean, succinct statements. The elevation in his effortless jumps allows him time to embroider the fabric of the choreography.

"Pas de Deux Holberg," a modern, white pas de deux by John Cranko, is a new addition to the Joffrey repertory. Denise Jackson and Kevin McKenzie, however, were not up to the intricate, sculptural Cranko choreography.

THE PIECE should have been danced with abandon. Instead it was danced with a cool sense of control.

The most substantial piece of the evening was Jose Limon's "The Moore's Pavane," an abstract version of Othello. The four dancers tell the tragic story by interweaving their bodies with powerful, stylized movements.

The Limon work is a masterpiece, capturing the battle between good and evil with balanced tensions and synchronized movement. The Joffrey version is compelling in spite of itself — bloodless compared to its potential, but effective nonetheless.

Only Chryst as the sinister Iago has the ability to play with the fabric of his role. Beatriz Rodriguez and Jan Hanniford grow into their parts as the ballet develops, but Christian Holder never finds the character of Othello in his large, stilted movements.

"VIVA VIVALDI," a 1965 Arpino standard, was the company's opener. A Spanish-style, romatic number, the piece is full of aerial splits and dramatic leaps.

The mood of the piece was all but shattered by the stage cues accidentally amplified on the sound system. Ann Marie De Angelo stood out in the number as a dancer with both poise and phrasing.

The Joffrey will be at Ravinia through Sunday. Performances begin at 8:30 p.m. every evening with a matinee at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Diane Mermigas

Viewer opinion influences TV bosses

It's ironic that many television viewers say they feel isolated from the programming process. The television brain trust goes out of its way to ensure that television watchers see the least objectionable shows.

Although networks insist they screen plots for prospective series before untold numbers of volunteers in a controlled setting, probably no one you will ever meet will attest to watching such a preview.

And yet, the very heart and soul of programming has to do with personalities, subject matter, appearances and lines that appeal to the viewer.

WHAT THE largest percentage of viewers like and do not like will determine the success or failure of prime time programming and even the newscasts.

While audience testing of possible shows or special concepts is left up to the television brains on the West Coast, most of the testing relative to local news broadcasts is conducted independnetly by the network-owned-and-operated stations in large cities.

In Chicago, television bosses say, viewer preference really counts. It is regularly sought and much valued. If stations give viewers what they want to see, the result will be high ratings, and high ratings mean big advertising dollars.

The three netwolk television stations in Chicago, as in most other cities, assure themselves of a continuing handle on viewer trends and preferences through audience research.

Stations want a specific composite profile of the people who watch and do not watch the weeknight and weekend newscasts including their age, sex, income, education, profession, and number of children.

THEY ALSO want to know what people like and dislike about their news shows. Is there a working chemistry among the on-air personalities? Is one anchorman too slick and another too sloppy? Are the regular feature spots on consumer affairs and health pertinent? Is the news set appealing to the eye? What about the order and play of news stories reported?

All of the Chicago stations want the same information and they use virtually the same techniques to get it.

Sometimes they ask people to watch certain news shows for an extended period, and later question them over the telephone about what they saw.

Sometimes they gather people into a large auditorium where they can view videotapes of news show segments and then complete questionnaires or participate in group conversation.

Whether it is writing or verbalizing their comments, research participants are always chosen by a scientific, random sampling to provide a cross section of people from the Chicago area, television officials say.

NBC's research department conducts most of the research study pertaining to the WMAQ-TV, Channel 5, newscasts during the year, said news director Sheldon Hoffman.

WLS-TV, Channel 7, like many other ABC stations, contracts with two of the nation's biggest consulting firms, Frank Magid Associates and McHugh and Hoffman, Inc.

CBS has its own research groups which subcontracts with various research firms in the Chicago area to conduct studies for WBBM-TV, Channel 2.

The research, done in large groups of approximately 500, or on an individual basis in homes, is conducted several times each year by each of the stations during periods representing "normal" programming, television bosses say.

But, unknown to many until the last year or so, was a futuristic kind of technology known as the Galvanic Skin Response, that WBBM TV, Channel 2, and the four other CBS-owned television stations in the country frequently use.

As conducted by the ERA Research firm based in San Francisco, about 100 viewers at a time are asked to watch newscast clips in a screening room where electrodes are attached to their fingertips to measure their "visceral" response to what they watch.

The electrodes, wired to a paper graph, reveal the viewer's excitement level. Extreme fluctuations on the graph prove a positive response while a more steady reaction is negative.

The last time WBBM-TV,utilized the GSR method, along with other oral and written surveys, was in 1975 and 1976.

There has been no decision to discontinue the use of the skin response tests, said WBBM-TV general manager Neil Derrough, "We just haven't had an occasion to use them for a while."

IT MAY BE, however, that the eerie form of reaction research will not be reinstated in Chicago because it has not proved particularly effective.

One of the conclusions WBBM-TV bosses came to, partly based on the GSR research, was to dismiss weatherman John Coughlin and replace him with Tom Alderman. Maybe it is that Coughlin did not seem debonair enough.

Chicago area viewers responded with bags full of mail and unending telephone calls in protest, and today, Coughlin is back on the air at his old post.

"We have no other way of measuring whether viewers like what we're doing or who we're using on the air. But, that is one example of where the testing results proved wrong," Derrough admits.

ABC's "Good Morning, America" hostess Sandy Hill, was another victim of the lie-detector-like skin reaction testing. She was dismissed from her on-air reporting job from KNXT in Los Angeles without bosses specifically admitting it was a result of her poor showing on the test results.

"I hope that the backlash of that event more than a year and a half ago now has put pressure on station management throughout the country to use another technique that is far less offensive," she said recently.

JOHN COUGHLIN

CHICAGO TELEVISION station managers and news directors insist that the research findings supplied them about every six months is just one more source of information and one more tool to use in making their decisions.

"In the end, the decision-making responsibility is your own. You can't base your whole decision on the research. Research consultants and the information they supply are valuable tools but they must be treated as just that," Phil Boyer, WLS-TV station manager who recently decided to change his weeknight newscast and air the controversial ABC comedy "Soap" at 9:30 p.m. instead of an hour earlier this fall despite research that suggests the contrary.

"What the research often does is reaffirm some change you had already decided on," said Hoffman. "But, it's silly to think that stations like our own spend thousands of dollars each year on research and never make use of the results. We weigh the results and act on them with discretion."

So if viewers are wondering where the idea for a new anchorman, a new set for the weeknight newscast or a new feature on consumer affairs came from, don't bother looking any further than your own backyard. Chances are such changes are prompted in part by viewer research—the kind of expensive, intense research that goes unnoticed by the general public

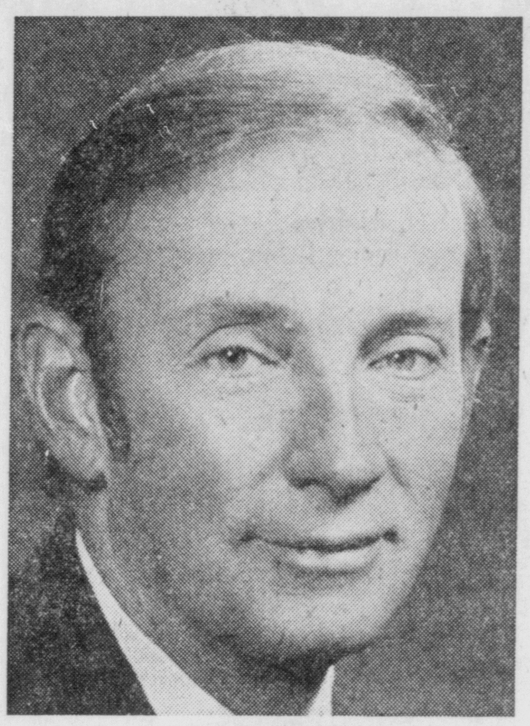
One of the conclusions WBBM-TV bosses came to, partly based on the GSR research, was to dismiss weatherman John Coughlin and replace him with Tom Alderman. Maybe it is that Coughlin did not seem debonair enough.

Chicago area viewers responded with bags full of mail and unending telephone calls in protest, and today, Coughlin is back on the air at his old post.

"We have no other way of measuring whether viewers like what we're doing or who we're using on the air. But, that is one example of where the testing results proved wrong," Derrough admits.

ABC's "Good Morning, America" hostess Sandy Hill, was another victim of the lie-detector-like skin reaction testing. She was dismissed from her on-air reporting job from KNXT in Los Angeles without bosses specifically admitting it was a result of her poor showing on the test results.

"I hope that the backlash of that event more than a year and a half ago now has put pressure on station management throughout the country to use another technique that is far less offensive," she said recently.



JOHN COUGHLIN

CHICAGO TELEVISION station managers and news directors insist that the research findings supplied them about every six months is just one more source of information and one more tool to use in making their decisions.

"In the end, the decision-making responsibility is your own. You can't base your whole decision on the research. Research consultants and the information they supply are valuable tools but they must be treated as just that," Phil Boyer, WLS-TV station manager who recently decided to change his weeknight newscast and air the controversial ABC comedy "Soap" at 9:30 p.m. instead of an hour earlier this fall despite research that suggests the contrary.

"What the research often does is reaffirm some change you had already decided on," said Hoffman. "But, it's silly to think that stations like our own spend thousands of dollars each year on research and never make use of the results. We weigh the results and act on them with discretion."

So if viewers are wondering where the idea for a new anchorman, a new set for the weeknight newscast or a new feature on consumer affairs came from, don't bother looking any further than your own backyard. Chances are such changes are prompted in part by viewer research—the kind of expensive, intense research that goes unnoticed by the general public

Passed ball dooms Cubs

by ART MUGALIAN

Pittsburgh lefthander Jerry Reuss struck out his 1,000th major league batter Thursday, but his Pirate teammates were just as anxious to celebrate Ray Burris's 394th career whiff.

That was the one that got away, the one that cost the Cubs a ball game, the one that kept Burris on the mound long enough to serve up his third home-run ball of the day.

Burris has been on the embarrassing end of 26 home-run pitches this season, which is more than twice as many as any other Cub pitcher. But No. 26, on a crisp, autumn-like afternoon at Wrigley Field, was a real gimme. It was a two-run shot onto the left-field catwalk by Pittsburgh's Phil Garner after the third out had already been recorded in the fifth inning.

IT MEANT the difference in the Pirates' first 1977 win at Wrigley Field, a 7-6 victory at the expense of Burris, now 11-12.

Burris had already given up gopher balls to Al Oliver and Dave Parker, proving that the wind does not have to be blowing out to accommodate long-ball hitters at Wrigley. The northeast wind at 17 MPH blew right in the batters' faces.

Despite the solo homers by Oliver, in the second, and Parker, the league's leading hitter, in the fourth, the Cubs went into the fifth with a 2-2 tie. Omar Moreno opened the fateful inning with a single past Burris, then proceeded to steal second as Duffy Dyer struck out. Moreno took third on an infield out.

Third base is where Moreno should have remained for eternity. However, Frank Taveras, the next batter, swing and missed at a 2-and-2 fastball that got away from catcher George Mitterwald, allowing Moreno to score.

IT ALSO allowed Garner to bat with Taveras on base. His homer, No. 16 of the season for the Charlie Finley refugee, thrust Pittsburgh into a 5-2 lead.

"It was high and it was taking off, but I felt like I should have caught it," said Mitterwald, who agreed with the official scorer's decision that the gaffe was a passed ball instead of a wild pitch, as originally announced.

Burris, twice a 15-game winner, was lifted for pinch-hitter Bobby Darwin in the fifth and Darwin delivered a double that sent Mitterwald to third. Both Cub baserunners tallied on a single by Dave Rosello, who was again playing in place of injured shortstop Ivan DeJesus.

But big Ray was on the hook and when the Pirates scored twice more in the sixth off Pete Broberg — another homer, this one by Bill Robinson, and another unearned run resulting from errors by Bill Buckner and Rosello — it seemed hopeless.

WHICH IT was, even though the Cubs got two more runs in the eighth on a two-out, two-run single by Manny Trillo.

"That strikeout hurt us," said Cub manager Herman Franks. "that was three runs. It was a real backbreaker."

Franks was willing to talk about 24-year-old Dennis Lamp, a righthanded pitcher from Wichita who replaced Steve Renko on the staff Thursday when Renko was traded to the White Sox. But Franks doesn't see young Lamp replacing Burris in the starting rotation — not yet anyway.

"Burris has to keep going, he has to keep going," Franks reiterated. "Lamp will have to get his feet wet in relief first. Then we'll see. But they tell me he's a hard thrower."

Burris gave up just four hits in five innings, but only one was for less than four bases. "He's getting the ball up too much," said Franks. "When he's down, he's tough."

MITTERWALD AGREED. "Ray was throwing the ball good," said the Baron. "But the homers they hit were no cheapies. They had to be hit hard with the wind blowing the way it was."

The Cubs had opened the first inning with straight singles by Rosello, Gene Clines and Buckner, good for a run. Jerry Morales then slammed one to the vines that was caught, perhaps saving the neck of Pirate starter Reuss. The lefty surrendered a sacrifice fly to Bobby Murcer a minute later, then somehow survived a 7 2/3 innings until Kent Tekulve bailed him out with shutout relief the rest of the way.

Luckily for Reuss, when he fanned Clines in the third for No. 1,000, Clines stayed fanned.

White Sox go to Cubs for help, land Renko

The White Sox went across town Thursday looking for the pitching help they badly need to complement their strong offense as they battle for the American League West lead.

They came back with right-handed pitcher Steve Renko, acquiring him from the Cubs for minor league pitcher Larry Anderson.

Renko, who drew starting assignments in seven of his 13 Cub appearances, had a 2-2 record and an earned-run average of 4.5. He was on the disabled list this season from April 29 to June 21.

The Cubs had acquired Renko, 32, from Montreal, where his 68 victories in seven seasons set a team record for the expansion club.

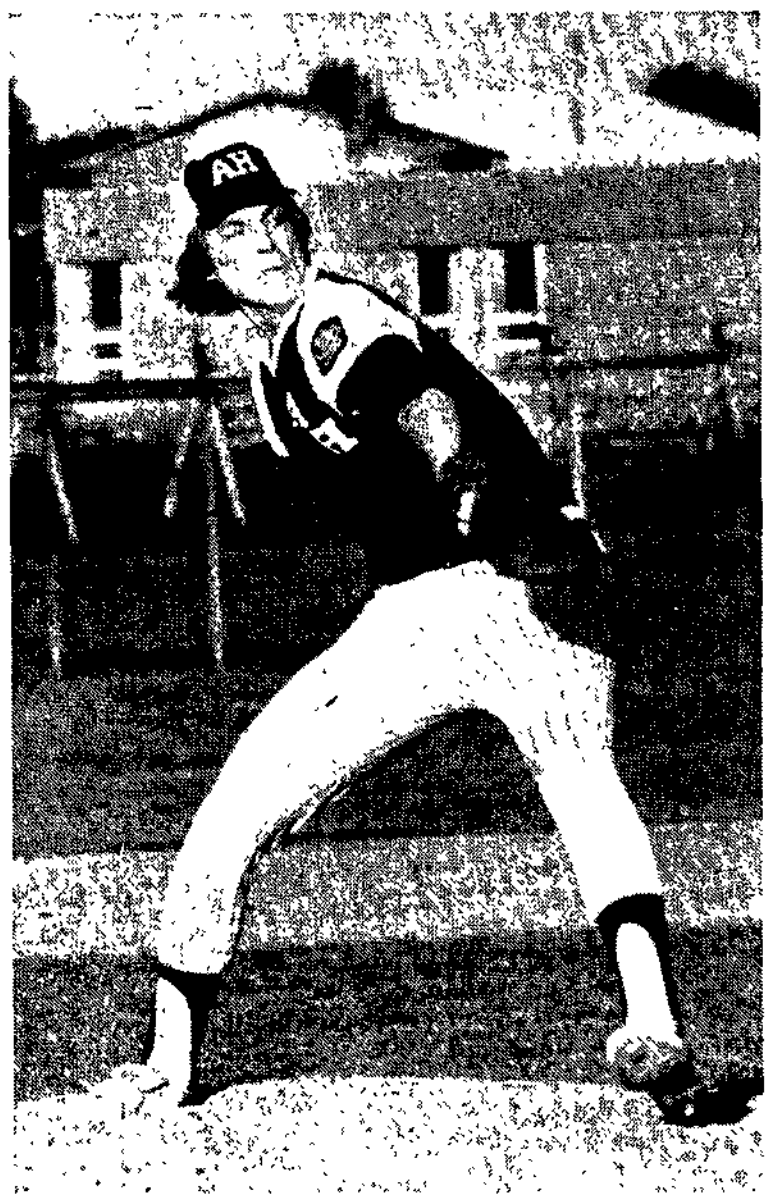
ANDERSON, a right-handed hurler with Iowa in the American Association, played with the White Sox three weeks in June and compiled a 1-3 record, all in relief. He was assigned to the Cubs' Wichita farm club in the AA.

To make room on the roster for Renko, the Sox assigned pitcher Randy Wiles to Iowa.

The Cubs also announced they had placed utility infielder Mick Kelleher on the 15-day disabled list because of a broken thumb.

Kelleher and Renko will be replaced on the roster by 24-year-old Wichita farmhands shortstop Mike Sember and right-handed pitcher Dennis Lamp.

Arlington keeps clearing hurdles



TOURNAMENT TOUGH. Arlington Heights' pitcher Kevin McBride bears down when it comes to post-season play. McBride won two games for Arlington in the state American Legion tourney, including the final game against Granite City, 5-1.

Don Friske

Byline report

Even though the 1977 state American Legion baseball tournament didn't offer as many memorable scenes as the Cook County gathering that came before it, there were still many images that stick in the mind.

Of course, Arlington Heights Post 208 finished on top of the other teams that competed in Galesburg. It was the second straight state championship for Arlington, and it showed in the players' reactions after the final game against Granite City.

They were understandably excited and happy, but it was a different sort of celebration than most. It ended quickly, and it was modest. You could tell it was a team that had gone through this before.

IN THE OVERALL picture, the state tournament was merely a step forward for the Arlington team sponsored by Bill Cook Buick. But it was a big step because they had to win to remain eligible for the national title, which they almost captured last summer.

Arlington came one run from winning the big game in New Hampshire, where the nationals will be held again this year. To keep hopes alive, Arlington will have to first make it through the regional tourney, which begins next Wednesday in Bellwood, Ill.

For the second year in a row, Granite City was Arlington's victim in the final game of state competition. For one Granite City rooter, who had every finger on each hand crossed, and another, who sat slumped in his chair when it was all over, it was a long weekend with a glum conclusion.

Twice now in as many years, Granite City has had to come out of the loser's bracket following an opening-game defeat only to lose in the finals to Arlington. To earn second place, they had to win three straight games after dropping a 2-1 decision to Rock Island.

BUT ARLINGTON proved to be the team with the pitching depth and the desire to hold onto the first-place trophy for one more year.

Many people, especially members of the teams that were eliminated before the final encounter took place, couldn't figure out why two byes had been given in the six-team tournament.

Barrington and Arlington were awarded the byes in a divisional draw held in Bloomington before the tourney. It resulted in the winners of the first two games on opening day having to play again a few hours later.

"I've never seen a tournament where they tantalize the winners like this one," said Jim Isaacson, Galesburg's coach. "We won, and then had to play a fresh team right away."

THAT TEAM WAS Arlington, and the result was a 12-1 defeat for Isaacson's players. The next opponent for the eventual state champs was Rock Island.

Just before the game, a heavy rainstorm covered the dry field. After the tourney schedule was completely postponed on Thursday because of rain, the next two days were sunny and hot.

But the Arlington-Rock Island game went as scheduled, although two storms threatened with thunder and lightning to the north and south.

Finally, in the seventh inning, another rainfall suspended the action until the next morning. It halted some Rock Island momentum, as they had already scored two runs in the inning on some Arlington errors.

COACH LLOYD Meyer took the opportunity to regroup his team in the motel Saturday night, where he decided to have Todd Walker pitch the conclusion of the game the next morn-

Good guys finish first in 'One on One'

Bob Frisk

Sports Editor

Each year the colleges that take basketball seriously send their salesmen out to comb the country for the fresh talent required to maintain their prestige, pay for their arenas, placate their students and pry open alumni pocketbooks.

It is an athletic maxim that a man with no special coaching skills can win if he recruits well and that a superb tactician without talented players is a man soon without a job.

The coaches' alphabet begins with W and ends with L.

"ONE ON ONE" is the first full-length movie touching on the business of college basketball recruiting. The film, currently showing in the area, offers a somewhat distorted view of college athletics but is an entertaining story that really doesn't have to be believed to be enjoyed.

What "One on One" does vividly illustrate is that sports movies have entered a new era. "Rocky," the story of a down-and-out boxer who almost becomes champion, turned a $1 million investment into a $30 million blockbuster. "Bad News Bears," a film about a group of kids playing sandlot baseball, was made for $3.9 million and has returned $22 million with a sequel currently in theaters.

There are more sports films on the way. Hollywood is taking a new look at one of its immutable laws: Sports pictures do not make money.

Sports movies have failed in the past because the stories customarily relied on the drama of the contest or event to carry the burden of the plot. The actors were inept, if not hilarious athletes. Remember Tony Perkins, Jimmy Stewart, Gary Cooper, William Bendix?

AMERICANS ARE more sports minded now, perhaps due to television's coverage. Writers are building their stories more carefully, and actor expertise has become considerably more convincing.

Perkins' portrayal of a basketball player in "Tall Story" gave the impression of a man falling from a tree.

Times have changed. Robby Benson, star of "One on One," actually can dribble and shoot a basketball. The action shots are quite well done, very believable.

Benson co-wrote (with his father) "One on One" and plays a hotshot basketball player named Henry Steele. Although Steele is only 5 feet 10 inches, he has a great shooting touch, great moves and is heavily recruited by "Western University" and Moreland Smith, a no-nonsense coach played beautifully by G. D. Spradlin.

STEELE LANDS a handsome scholarship package spiced with a car, job, tutor, weekly paycheck, plus other goodies. But he enters the big city college as a physically and socially awkward youngster.

In dress, manner and playing style the naive Steele stands out like a sore thumb. He wears his high school letter jacket at all times and carries a basketball like a security blanket.

Actor Benson gives a strong performance as an innocent from the country plunked down in the wilds of a big city, a high school star who finds himself just one of the crowd in college.

Henry Steele's innocence and sincerity attract a senior psychology student who is hired as a tutor by the athletic department. At first she regards Steele as just another of the department's "animals," but she is soon won over.

SHE EVEN tosses aside a bearded psychology professor, a vestige of the 1960s who believes, "Militarism is basically authoritarian and so is college athletics. Both sanction violence. Both are anti-intellectual."

"Maybe college sports the way they run it is garbage," says hero Steele, "but playing sports is beautiful."

At first "One on One" appears to be a probe of the realities of the sports system, but it gradually shifts direction. Instead of delving into the cause and effects of the system, the film strides into more familiar — and audience pleasing — love story.

Steele's adjustments in college become such a problem that it affects his play on the basketball court. He soon finds himself at odds with the coach and is asked to renounce his scholarship. Steele refuses.

WITH THE HELP of his tutor and love interest, Henry gets his grades in shape and stands up to the coach and some ugly tactics. The hero endures. The audience responds.

There are some crisply cut scenes as Steele works himself into top condition, as in "Rocky." A climactic action sequence is followed by a resolution of the confrontation between coach and player.

Maybe the end is pure Hollywood, chump-to-champ stuff, but what's so bad about that in this day when "realism" is shoved at you in every direction.

Sports pictures may replace the western as the hero-dominated movies. There is that clear-cut distinction between two sides, and audiences get to cheer for one, most often the underdog.

"ONE ON ONE" was filmed at Colorado State University because UCLA and USC, schools first approached by the studio, refused to allow the use of their facilities. They thought the picture was too sensitive and would reflect on their high-geared programs.

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell, one of the top recruiters in the country, saw the movie and felt it exaggerated at times to the edge of fantasy, despite claims to make it authentic.

"Well, I don't think it could happen that way," Driesell said, "not the way things are today."

"One on One" is worth seeing, a thoroughly entertaining movie. It is not to be viewed as a documentary on the sports system.

Coaches are not all con artists. And not all those who play the game of basketball are heroic.

The audience must sift through it all and come up with a reasonable assessment.

"Burris has to keep going, he has to keep going," Franks reiterated. "Lamp will have to get his feet wet in relief first. Then we'll see. But they tell me he's a hard thrower."

Burris gave up just four hits in five innings, but only one was for less than four bases. "He's getting the ball up too much," said Franks. "When he's down, he's tough."

MITTERWALD AGREED. "Ray was throwing the ball good," said the Baron. "But the homers they hit were no cheapies. They had to be hit hard with the wind blowing the way it was."

The Cubs had opened the first inning with straight singles by Rosello, Gene Clines and Buckner, good for a run. Jerry Morales then slammed one to the vines that was caught, perhaps saving the neck of Pirate starter Reuss. The lefty surrendered a sacrifice fly to Bobby Murcer a minute later, then somehow survived a 7 2/3 innings until Kent Tekulve bailed him out with shutout relief the rest of the way.

Luckily for Reuss, when he fanned Clines in the third for No. 1,000, Clines stayed fanned.

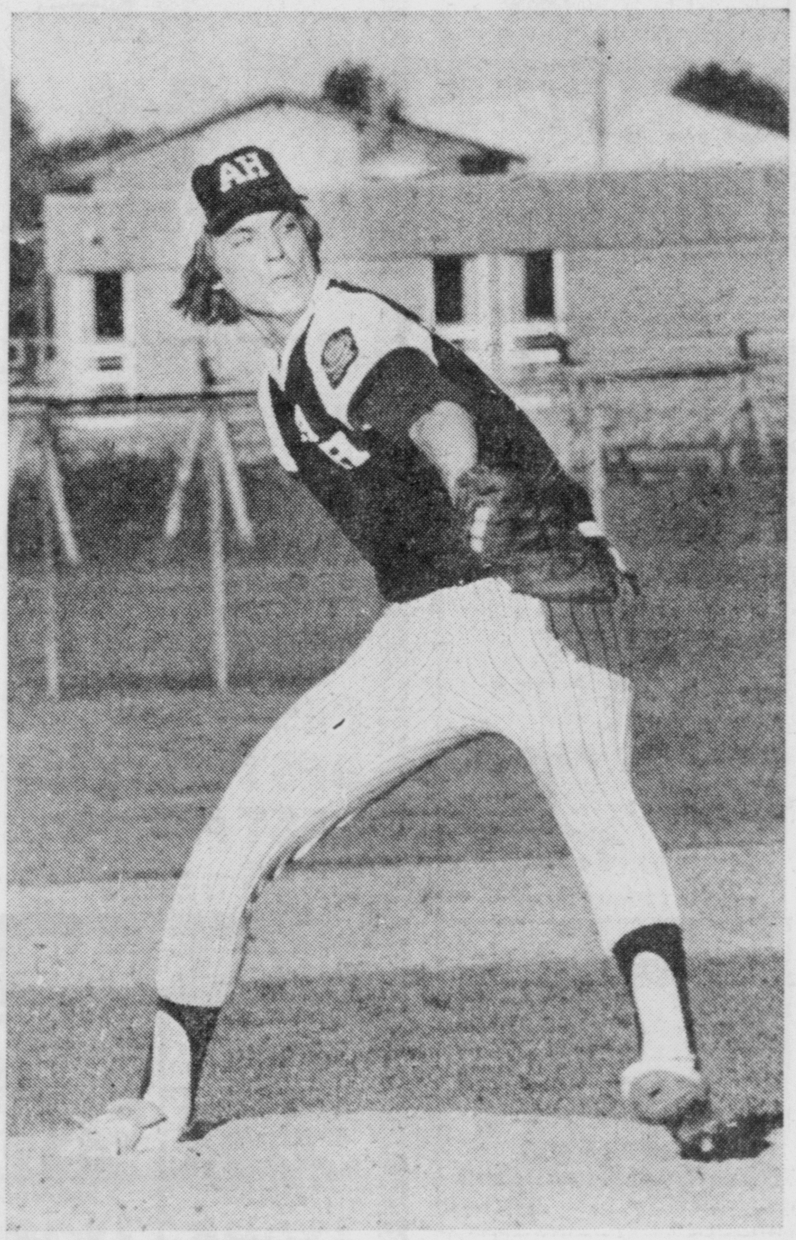
Arlington keeps clearing hurdles



TOURNAMENT TOUGH. Arlington Heights' pitcher Kevin McBride bears down when it comes to post-season play. McBride won two games for Arlington in the state American Legion tourney, including the final game against Granite City, 5-1.

Don Friske

Byline report

Even though the 1977 state American Legion baseball tournament didn't offer as many memorable scenes as the Cook County gathering that came before it, there were still many images that stick in the mind.

Of course, Arlington Heights Post 208 finished on top of the other teams that competed in Galesburg. It was the second straight state championship for Arlington, and it showed in the players' reactions after the final game against Granite City.

They were understandably excited and happy, but it was a different sort of celebration than most. It ended quickly, and it was modest. You could tell it was a team that had gone through this before.

IN THE OVERALL picture, the state tournament was merely a step forward for the Arlington team sponsored by Bill Cook Buick. But it was a big step because they had to win to remain eligible for the national title, which they almost captured last summer.

Arlington came one run from winning the big game in New Hampshire, where the nationals will be held again this year. To keep hopes alive, Arlington will have to first make it through the regional tourney, which begins next Wednesday in Bellwood, Ill.

For the second year in a row, Granite City was Arlington's victim in the final game of state competition. For one Granite City rooter, who had every finger on each hand crossed, and another, who sat slumped in his chair when it was all over, it was a long weekend with a glum conclusion.

Twice now in as many years, Granite City has had to come out of the loser's bracket following an opening-game defeat only to lose in the finals to Arlington. To earn second place, they had to win three straight games after dropping a 2-1 decision to Rock Island.

BUT ARLINGTON proved to be the team with the pitching depth and the desire to hold onto the first-place trophy for one more year.

Many people, especially members of the teams that were eliminated before the final encounter took place, couldn't figure out why two byes had been given in the six-team tournament.

Barrington and Arlington were awarded the byes in a divisional draw held in Bloomington before the tourney. It resulted in the winners of the first two games on opening day having to play again a few hours later.

"I've never seen a tournament where they tantalize the winners like this one," said Jim Isaacson, Galesburg's coach. "We won, and then had to play a fresh team right away."

THAT TEAM WAS Arlington, and the result was a 12-1 defeat for Isaacson's players. The next opponent for the eventual state champs was Rock Island.

Just before the game, a heavy rainstorm covered the dry field. After the tourney schedule was completely postponed on Thursday because of rain, the next two days were sunny and hot.

But the Arlington-Rock Island game went as scheduled, although two storms threatened with thunder and lightning to the north and south.

Finally, in the seventh inning, another rainfall suspended the action until the next morning. It halted some Rock Island momentum, as they had already scored two runs in the inning on some Arlington errors.

COACH LLOYD Meyer took the opportunity to regroup his team in the motel Saturday night, where he decided to have Todd Walker pitch the conclusion of the game the next morn-

White Sox go to Cubs for help, land Renko

The White Sox went across town Thursday looking for the pitching help they badly need to complement their strong offense as they battle for the American League West lead.

They came back with right-handed pitcher Steve Renko, acquiring him from the Cubs for minor league pitcher Larry Anderson.

Renko, who drew starting assignments in seven of his 13 Cub appearances, had a 2-2 record and an earned-run average of 4.5. He was on the disabled list this season from April 23 to June 21.

The Cubs had acquired Renko, 32, from Montreal, where his 68 victories in seven seasons set a team record for the expansion club.

ANDERSON, a right-handed hurler with Iowa in the American Association, played with the White Sox three weeks in June and compiled a 1-3 record, all in relief. He was assigned to the Cubs' Wichita farm club in the AA.

To make room on the roster for Renko, the Sox assigned pitcher Randy Wiles to Iowa.

The Cubs also announced they had placed utility infielder Mick Kelleher on the 15-day disabled list because of a broken thumb.

Kelleher and Renko will be replaced on the roster by 24-year-old Wichita farmhands shortstop Mike Sember and right-handed pitcher Dennis Lamp.

Good guys finish first in 'One on One'

Each year the colleges that take basketball seriously send their salesmen out to comb the country for the fresh talent required to maintain their prestige, pay for their arenas, placate their students and pry open alumni pocketbooks.

It is an athletic maxim that a man with no special coaching skills can win if he recruits well and that a superb tactician without talented players is a man soon without a job.

The coaches' alphabet begins with W and ends with L.

"ONE ON ONE" is the first full-length movie touching on the business of college basketball recruiting. The film, currently showing in the area, offers a somewhat distorted view of college athletics but is an entertaining story that really doesn't have to be believed to be enjoyed.

What "One on One" does vividly illustrate is that sports movies have entered a new era. "Rocky," the story of a down-and-out boxer who almost becomes champion, turned a $1 million investment into a $30 million blockbuster. "Bad News Bears," a film about a group of kids playing sandlot baseball, was made for $3.9 million and has returned $22 million with a sequel currently in theaters.

There are more sports films on the way. Hollywood is taking a new look at one of its immutable laws: Sports pictures do not make money.

Sports movies have failed in the past because the stories customarily relied on the drama of the contest or event to carry the burden of the plot. The actors were inept, if not hilarious athletes. Remember Tony Perkins, Jimmy Stewart, Gary Cooper, William Bendix?

AMERICANS ARE more sports minded now, perhaps due to television's coverage. Writers are building their stories more carefully, and actor expertise has become considerably more convincing.

Perkins' portrayal of a basketball player in "Tall Story" gave the impression of a man falling from a tree.

Times have changed. Robby Benson, star of "One on One," actually can dribble and shoot a basketball. The action shots are quite well done, very believable.

Benson co-wrote (with his father) "One on One" and plays a hotshot basketball player named Henry Steele. Although Steele is only 5 feet 10 inches, he has a great shooting touch, great moves and is heavily recruited by "Western University" and Moreland Smith, a no-nonsense coach played beautifully by G. D. Spradlin.

STEELE LANDS a handsome scholarship package spiced with a car, job, tutor, weekly paycheck, plus other goodies. But he enters the big city college as a physically and socially awkward youngster.

In dress, manner and playing style the naive Steele stands out like a sore thumb. He wears his high school letter jacket at all times and carries a basketball like a security blanket.

Actor Benson gives a strong performance as an innocent from the country plunked down in the wilds of a big city, a high school star who finds himself just one of the crowd in college.

Henry Steele's innocence and sincerity attract a senior psychology student who is hired as a tutor by the athletic department. At first she regards Steele as just another of the department's "animals," but she is soon won over.

SHE EVEN tosses aside a bearded psychology professor, a vestige of the 1960s who believes, "Militarism is basically authoritarian and so is college athletics. Both sanction violence. Both are anti-intellectual."

"Maybe college sports the way they run it is garbage," says hero Steele, "but playing sports is beautiful."

At first "One on One" appears to be a probe of the realities of the sports system, but it gradually shifts direction. Instead of delving into the cause and effects of the system, the film strides into more familiar — and audience pleasing — love story.

Steele's adjustments in college become such a problem that it affects his play on the basketball court. He soon finds himself at odds with the coach and is asked to renounce his scholarship. Steele refuses.

WITH THE HELP of his tutor and love interest, Henry gets his grades in shape and stands up to the coach and some ugly tactics. The hero endures. The audience responds.

There are some crisply cut scenes as Steele works himself into top condition, as in "Rocky." A climactic action sequence is followed by a resolution of the confrontation between coach and player.

Maybe the end is pure Hollywood, chump-to-champ stuff, but what's so bad about that in this day when "realism" is shoved at you in every direction.

Sports pictures may replace the western as the hero-dominated movies. There is that clear-cut distinction between two sides, and audiences get to cheer for one, most often the underdog.

"ONE ON ONE" was filmed at Colorado State University because UCLA and USC, schools first approached by the studio, refused to allow the use of their facilities. They thought the picture was too sensitive and would reflect on their high-geared programs.

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell, one of the top recruiters in the country, saw the movie and felt it exaggerated at times to the edge of fantasy, despite claims to make it authentic.

"Well, I don't think it could happen that way," Driesell said, "not the way things are today."

"One on One" is worth seeing, a thoroughly entertaining movie. It is not to be viewed as a documentary on the sports system.

Coaches are not all con artists. And not all those who play the game of basketball are heroic.

The audience must sift through it all and come up with a reasonable assessment.

12 to reach post today in $30,000 Bishop test

Milwaukee Avenue heads a field of 12 set to go postward in the $30,000 William Hal Bishop Handicap, today's feature offering at Arlington Park. The six and one-half furlong event for four-year-olds and up (Illinois-bred/foaled) honors a member of Arlington's recently dedicated Hall of Fame Racing Museum.

Milwaukee Avenue has put together a win streak of three, and his most recent triumph was a front-running nine-length victory in the Illinois Handicap over a sloopy strip. The versatile four-year-old T.V. Lark colt has won at seven furlongs, one mile and a mile and one-sixteenth. Trained by Mike Weissman, Milwaukee Avenue earned $118,455 in a sophomore campaign with eight wins, two seconds and two third in twenty-one trips postward.

Rattlemark will be the lone female in the W.H Bishop The five-year-old daughter of Rattle Dancer is as good as ever. In four 1977 efforts, Rattlemark has won a pair and has earnings slightly less than $25,000. Her most recent effort was a victory in the Abby's Crown Handicap.

Completing the Bishop field are Whisper King, Bret's Kicker, Fire Tree, Eddiejoebob, Iva's Pet, Avenir, Torpedo Teddy, Baroom, Six Man Band and Lightning Jet.

Whisper King has put together a modest win streak of two. The five-year-old son of Whisper Jet needs only to break well from the gate to be in contention to the wire. Bret's Kicker is a member of the dangerous Don Von Hemel barn which was a recent arrival from Ak-Sar-Ben. His return to competition versus state breds makes him a threat.

Sutton repeats history again

Don Sutton's mistake left him a little numb but it also put him in the record book along with some pretty fair company.

The veteran right-hander came within four outs of his first no-hitter and tied a National League record with his fifth career one-hitter Thursday when the Los Angeles Dodgers scored a 7-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants at Los Angeles.

Sutton, who had lost his last four decisions, allowed only a two-out single in the eighth inning to catcher Marc Hill to tie Mordecai Brown, Grover Cleveland Alexander and Jim Maloney for most career one-hitters in the National League.

Richie Hebner hit his first career grand slam home run in the fifth inning to power the Philadelphia Phillies and Jim Lonborg to an 8-3 victory over the host Montreal Expos.

Greg Luzinski also drive in two runs for Philadelphia with singles in the first and third innings, giving 99 RBIs for the season.

The win kept the Phils four games in front of the second place Pittsburgh Pirates and six and one-half games ahead of the third place Cubs.

Dock Ellis tossed a three-hitter and Toby Harrah and Bump Wills each hit solo home runs to pace the Texas Rangers to an 8-0 victory over visiting Toronto Blue Jays.

Ellis, 7-9, retired 19 from the third inning until the ninth, allowing only one runner as far as second. Texas scored at least once in each of the first five innings to remain atop the American League West by a half-game over the Minnesota Twins, one game ahead of the third place White Sox, and one and one-half games over the fourth place Kansas City Royals.

Larry Hisle stroked a two-run single during a four-run first inning and also scored two runs to lead the Minnesota Twins to an 8-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners at Bloomington, Minn.

Dennis Leonard tossed a four-hitter and Hal McRae tripled home a run and belted his 36th double of the season to spark the Kansas City Royals to a 4-0 victory over the home team Cleveland Indians.

Leonard, who was 15-5 on this date a year ago, struck out six and walked one in posting his third shutout and 13th victory against 10 losses.

George Scott drove in four runs with three singles and a double to support the nine-hit pitching of Ferguson Jenkins and lead the Boston Red Sox to their 17th victory in their last 19 games, an 8-4 triumph over the Milwaukee Brewers at Milwaukee.

Mickey Rivers singled home two runs to key a three-run seventh which carried the New York Yankees to their 10th victory in the last 11 games, a 5-4 decision over the Detroit Tigers in Detroit.

Jason Thompson hit his 23rd home run in the sixth to give Detroit a temporary 3-2 lead. It hit the top of the right field roof on its way down and became the first fair ball to be hit over the right field stands in Tigers Stadium since 1969.

12 to reach post today in $30,000 Bishop test

Milwaukee Avenue heads a field of 12 set to go postward in the $30,000 William Hal Bishop Handicap, today's feature offering at Arlington Park. The six and one-half furlong event for four-year-olds and up (Illinois-bred/foaled) honors a member of Arlington's recently dedicated Hall of Fame Racing Museum.

Milwaukee Avenue has put together a win streak of three, and his most recent triumph was a front-running nine-length victory in the Illinois Handicap over a sloopy strip. The versatile four-year-old T.V. Lark colt has won at seven furlongs, one mile and a mile and one-sixteenth. Trained by Mike Weissman, Milwaukee Avenue earned $118,455 in a sophomore campaign with eight wins, two seconds and two third in twenty-one trips postward.

Rattlemark will be the lone female in the W.H. Bishop. The five-year-old daughter of Rattle Dancer is as good as ever. In four 1977 efforts, Rattlemark has won a pair and has earnings slightly less than $25,000. Her most recent effort was a victory in the Abby's Crown Handicap.

Completing the Bishop field are Whisper King, Bret's Kicker, Fire Tree, Eddiejoebob, Iva's Pet, Avenir, Torpedo Teddy, Baroom, Six Man Band and Lightning Jet.

Whisper King has put together a modest win streak of two. The five-year-old son of Whisper Jet needs only to break well from the gate to be in contention to the wire. Bret's Kicker is a member of the dangerous Don Von Hemel barn which was a recent arrival from Ak-Sar-Ben. His return to competition versus state breds makes him a threat.

Sutton repeats history again

Don Sutton's mistake left him a little numb but it also put him in the record book along with some pretty fair company.

The veteran right-hander came within four outs of his first no-hitter and tied a National League record with his fifth career one-hitter Thursday when the Los Angeles Dodgers scored a 7-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants at Los Angeles.

Sutton, who had lost his last four decisions, allowed only a two-out single in the eighth inning to catcher Marc Hill to tie Mordecai Brown, Grover Cleveland Alexander and Jim Maloney for most career one-hitters in the National League.

Richie Hebner hit his first career grand slam home run in the fifth inning to power the Philadelphia Phillies and Jim Lonborg to an 8-3 victory over the host Montreal Expos.

Greg Luzinski also drive in two runs for Philadelphia with singles in the first and third innings, giving 99 RBIs for the season.

The win kept the Phils four games in front of the second place Pittsburgh Pirates and six and one-half games ahead of the third place Cubs.

Dock Ellis tossed a three-hitter and Toby Harrah and Bump Wills each hit solo home runs to pace the Texas Rangers to an 8-0 victory over visiting Toronto Blue Jays.

Ellis, 7-9, retired 19 from the third inning until the ninth, allowing only one runner as far as second. Texas scored at least once in each of the first five innings to remain atop the American League West by a half-game over the Minnesota Twins, one game ahead of the third place White Sox, and one and one-half games over the fourth place Kansas City Royals.

Larry Hisle stroked a two-run single during a four-run first inning and also scored two runs to lead the Minnesota Twins to an 8-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners at Bloomington, Minn.

Dennis Leonard tossed a four-hitter and Hal McRae tripled home a run and belted his 36th double of the season to spark the Kansas City Royals to a 4-0 victory over the home team Cleveland Indians.

Major league baseball

Leonard, who was 15-5 on this date a year ago, struck out six and walked one in posting his third shutout and 13th victory against 10 losses.

George Scott drove in four runs with three singles and a double to support the nine-hit pitching of Ferguson Jenkins and lead the Boston Red Sox to their 17th victory in their last 19 games, an 8-4 triumph over the Milwaukee Brewers at Milwaukee.

Mickey Rivers singled home two runs to key a three-run seventh which carried the New York Yankees to their 10th victory in the last 11 games, a 5-4 decision over the Detroit Tigers in Detroit.

Jason Thompson hit his 23rd home run in the sixth to give Detroit a temporary 3-2 lead. It hit the top of the right field roof on its way down and became the first fair ball to be hit over the right field stands in Tigers Stadium since 1969.

Surprise entries boost Arlington Classic field

A field of 11, including the surprise entries of Bertram Firestone's Honest Pleasure and Ogden Mills Phipps' highweight Majestic Light, was drawn Friday for Saturday's 46th running of the Arlington Classic Invitational Handicap at 1¼ miles over the main dirt course.

The field also includes a stable entry as Elmendorf Farm's Pay Tribute, a California shipper, and Proponent, locally based, will be coupled in the betting. The Classic carries a total purse of $159,000 with the winning owner receiving $90,000.

Both Honest Pleasure and Majestic Light were entered for Saturday's $100,000 added Amory L. Haskell Handicap at Monmouth Park. Majestic Light's trainer John Russell will watch the skies for rain and, in the event of an off-track likelihood, will fly the Prince Majestic colt to Arlington.

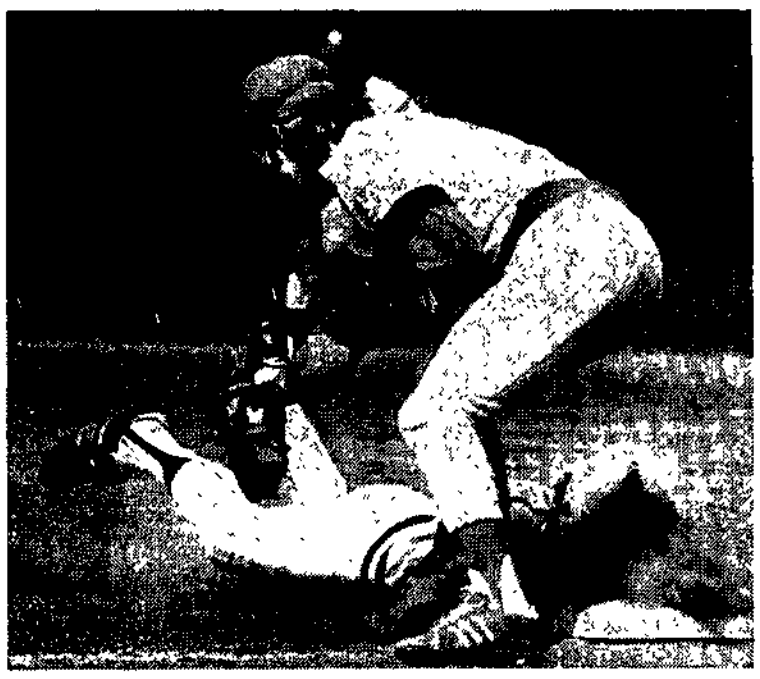
LeROY JOLLEY reportedly has made flight arrangements for Honest Pleasure's trip to Chicago. The champion two year old of 1975 won the rich Arlington-Washington Futurity that season. Jolley did not name a rider at either track while Russell named Sandy Hawley on Majestic Light at both tracks.

There is no difference in weight spread between Majestic Light and Honest Pleasure for either race. Majestic Light was assigned 124 at Monmouth and 125 pounds for the Classic. In both cases, Honest pleasure received one pound less.

The complete field in order of post position is: Charles Baker's Norcliffe, 115, Lloyd Duffy riding; Honest Pleasure, 124; Majestic Light, 125, with Hawley; Harry T. Mangurian Jr.'s American History, 114, Rueben Hernandez; Jim Manning's Dragset, 114, Jon Kunitake; Ridge Runner Stable's Satan's Hills, 112, no rider; Balmak Stable's On The Sly, 117, Gregg McCarron; Propontnt, 112, Bryan Fann; Pay Tribute, 118, Marco Castaneda; Mary Lou Cashman's Romeo, 112, John Lively; and Sanera Farm's Private Thoughts, 117, Ramon Perez.

MAJESTIC LIGHT, fully recovered from injuries received in last year's Travers won by Honest Pleasure, has won two straight stakes races — the Washington Park Handicap here and the recent Bernard Baruch Handicap at Saratoga.

Honest Pleasure, two year old champion in 1975, has started only three times this season. He was unplaced in an allowance test at Hialeah but won the Ben Ali Handicap at Keeneland. The What A Pleasure colt made his last start on August 3 when he finished second in a seven furlong allowance race.



LEAGUE'S LEADING baseestealer Frank Taveras of Pittsburgh is out in a cloud of dust, picked off first base in the third inning of Pirates' 7-6 victory over Cubs Thursday. Applying the tag is Bill Buckner. (Photo by Mike Seeling)

Surprise entries boost Arlington Classic field

A field of 11, including the surprise entries of Bertram Firestone's Honest Pleasure and Ogden Mills Phipps' highweight Majestic Light, was drawn Friday for Saturday's 46th running of the Arlington Classic Invitational Handicap at 1¼ miles over the main dirt course.

The field also includes a stable entry as Elmendorf Farm's Pay Tribute, a California shipper, and Proponent, locally based, will be coupled in the betting. The Classic carries a total purse of $150,000 with the winning owner receiving $90,000.

Both Honest Pleasure and Majestic Light were entered for Saturday's $100,000 added Amory L. Haskell Handicap at Monmouth Park. Majestic Light's trainer John Russell will watch the skies for rain and, in the event of an off-track likelihood, will fly the Prince Majestic colt to Arlington.

LeROY JOLLEY reportedly has made flight arrangements for Honest Pleasure's trip to Chicago. The champion two year old of 1975 won the rich Arlington-Washington Futurity that season. Jolley did not name a rider at either track while Russell named Sandy Hawley on Majestic Light at both tracks.

There is no difference in weight spread betweeen Majestic Light and Honest Pleasure for either race. Majestic Light was assigned 124 at Monmouth and 125 pounds for the Classic. In both cases, Honest pleasure received one pound less.

The complete field in order of post position is: Charles Baker's Norcliffe, 115, Lloyd Duffy riding; Honest Pleasure, 124; Majestic Light, 125, with Hawley; Harry T. Mangurian Jr.'s American History, 114, Rueben Hernandez; Jim Manning's Dragset, 114, Jon Kunitake; Ridge Runner Stable's Satan's Hills, 112, no rider; Balmak Stable's On The Sly, 117, Gregg McCarron; Propontnt, 112, Bryan Fann; Pay Tribute, 118, Marco Castaneda; Mary Lou Cashman's Romeo, 112, John Lively; and Sanera Farm's Private Thoughts, 117, Ramon Perez.

MAJESTIC LIGHT, fully recovered from injuries received in last year's Travers won by Honest Pleasure, has won two straight stakes races — the Washington Park Handicap here and the recent Bernard Baruch Handicap at Saratoga.

Honest Pleasure, two year old champion in 1975, has started only three times this season. He was unplaced in an allowance test at Hialeah but won the Ben Ali Handicap at Keeneland. The What A Pleasure colt made his last start on August 3 when he finished second in a seven furlong allowance race.

LOS ANGELES Dodger pitcher Don Sutton is congratulated by wife Patti and daughter Staci, age three, after coming within four outs of throwing a no-hitter in a 7-0 win against the San Francisco Giants at Los Angeles Thursday.

Casals eliminated in Canadian Open

TORONTO — Marise Kruger of South Africa defeated top-seeded Rosie Casals, 6-4, 7-5, Thursday, eliminating the last of the top eight seeds from the $160,000 Canadian Open Tennis Tournament.

Kruger, 19, a finalist at last year's junior Wimbledon, knocked out fifth-seeded American Janet Newberry Wednesday when four of the top ranked women's players were eliminated including Australian star Evonne Goolagong.

"Basically I shouldn't have played," said Casls. "I didn't want to play here. I didn't want to play outside so soon after team tennis. It's a drastic adjustment to playing on outdoors courts from playing on fast carpeting indoors."

Kruger didn't employ any special tactic to achieve the upset.

"I've never played her before," she said. "So I just tried to play my own game. I was playing my shots deep and trying to move her around and keep her guessing."

Watson gains revenge vs. Tovella

MILWAUKEE — Dave Watson fought off Sal Tovella in the stretch for a car length victory Thursday in the 150-mile Wisconsin State Fair stock car race and made amends for Tovella's car length win over Watson on the same track last Sunday.

Watson, a 31-year-old rookie from Milton, Wis., went out in front on the 93rd lap and had a four-second lead over Tovella until the yellow flag went up on the 145th lap because of a minor accident. It was a dogfight thereafter until the final flag.

Tovella, 49, Chicago, beat Watson in Sunday's 200 miler when he bumped him out of the lead on the final lap and took the checkered a car length ahead of him.

It was Watson's second win in Milwaukee this season. He won the Miller 200 on July 10, his first major victory on the circuit. Thursday's win netted him $3,783, and Tovella picked up $2,555.

U.S. college cagers beat Belgium

SOFIA, Bulgaria — A fast and classy U.S. collegiate basketball team Thursday rolled over Belgium 136-57, for its first victory in the World Student Games.

Led by Louisville guard Darrell Griffith with 20 points, Portland State's Freeman Williams with 18 and Olympic gold medalist Phil Hubbard with 17, the Americans left the smaller, slower Belgians in the dust with razzle-dazzle dunk shots and grandstand plays. The U.S. led 67-29 at the half.

"The important thing is that they played very well together," coach Denny Crum of Louisville said. "For the first time, they were unselfish with their shots. There must have been 60 assists out there."

The U. S. squad, assembled at Louisville three weeks ago, has already played ten games together in Italy and Yugoslavia. It showed.

"We're anxious to play some of the good teams," Crum said. "We beat Czechoslovakia twice in Italy, but they were tough."

Scandal Sheet earns harness win

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Scandal Sheet won the $45,520 Hambletonian Preview harness race at the Illinois State Fair Thursday, but missed the track record of 1:58.1 by one-fifth of a second. The winner's share was $22,760.

The dark brown colt, driven by Dick Richardson Jr., won his preliminary heat and came back later in the day to take the final of the review futurity for 3-year-old trotters, billed as one of the major races before the famed Hambletonian in Southern Illinois.

He rounded the track in 1:58.2 and 1:58.4 to finish ahead of Jurgy Hanover, driven by John Simpson Jr. Jurgy Hanover, finished second twice, at 1:58.3 and 1:59.0. Third place in both races went to Texas, driven by Bill Herman.

Casals eliminated in Canadian Open

TORONTO — Marise Kruger of South Africa defeated top-seeded Rosie Casals, 6-4, 7-5, Thursday, eliminating the last of the top eight seeds from the $160,000 Canadian Open Tennis Tournament.

Kruger, 19, a finalist at last year's junior Wimbledon, knocked out fifth-seeded American Janet Newberry Wednesday when four of the top ranked women's players were eliminated including Australian star Evonne Goolagong.

"Basically I shouldn't have played," said Casls. "I didn't want to play here. I didn't want to play outside so soon after team tennis. It's a drastic adjustment to playing on outdoors courts from playing on fast carpeting indoors."

Kruger didn't employ any special tactic to achieve the upset.

"I've never played her before," she said. "So I just tried to play my own game. I was playing my shots deep and trying to move her around and keep her guessing."

Watson gains revenge vs. Tovella

MILWAUKEE — Dave Watson fought off Sal Tovella in the stretch for a car length victory Thursday in the 150-mile Wisconsin State Fair stock car race and made amends for Tovella's car length win over Watson on the same track last Sunday.

Watson, a 31-year-old rookie from Milton, Wis., went out in front on the 93rd lap and had a four-second lead over Tovella until the yellow flag went up on the 145th lap because of a minor accident. It was a dogfight thereafter until the final flag.

Tovella, 49, Chicago, beat Watson in Sunday's 200 miler when he bumped him out of the lead on the final lap and took the checkered a car length ahead of him.

It was Watson's second win in Milwaukee this season. He won the Miller 200 on July 10, his first major victory on the circuit. Thursday's win netted him $3,783, and Tovella picked up $2,555.

U.S. college cagers beat Belgium

SOFIA, Bulgaria — A fast and classy U.S. collegiate basketball team Thursday rolled over Belgium 136-57, for its first victory in the World Student Games.

Led by Louisville guard Darrell Griffith with 20 points, Portland State's Freeman Williams with 18 and Olympic gold medalist Phil Hubbard with 17, the Americans left the smaller, slower Belgians in the dust with razzle-dazzle dunk shots and grandstand plays. The U.S. led 67-29 at the half.

"The important thing is that they played very well together," coach Denny Crum of Louisville said. "For the first time, they were unselfish with their shots. There must have been 60 assists out there."

The U. S. squad, assembled at Louisville three weeks ago, has already played ten games together in Italy and Yugoslavia. It showed.

"We're anxious to play some of the good teams," Crum said. "We beat Czechoslovakia twice in Italy, but they were tough."

Scandal Sheet earns harness win

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Scandal Sheet won the $45,520 Hambletonian Preview harness race at the Illinois State Fair Thursday, but missed the track record of 1:58.1 by one-fifth of a second. The winner's share was $22,760.

The dark brown colt, driven by Dick Richardson Jr., won his preliminary heat and came back later in the day to take the final of the review futurity for 3-year-old trotters, billed as one of the major races before the famed Hambletonian in Southern Illinois.

He rounded the track in 1:58.2 and 1:58.4 to finish ahead of Jurgy Hanover, driven by John Simpson Jr. Jurgy Hanover, finished second twice, at 1:58.3 and 1:59.0. Third place in both races went to Texas, driven by Bill Herman.

When the hitting stops, the music stops for Sox

Art Mugalian

Byline report

The White Sox may or may not win the pennant this year but it really doesn't matter. Their fans will drop dead of apo-lexy long before then anyway.

The ugly truth is the White Sox have no pitching. None whatsoever. And various estimates of the importance of pitching range from 60 per cent (sober calculation) to 95 per cent (drunken exaggeration).

LOSING A GAME by a 2-1 score in 18 innings as the Cubs did recently is one thing. It is frustrating when your team cannot score runs.

But losing 12-9 after blowing a six-run lead in the first inning is the kind of experience that sends fans scampering to the top of the Sears Tower. To jump.

A team with one ace pitcher or even two pitchers who can grip a baseball without developing tendonitis — a team like that could win a pennant, even a World Series. But the Sox don't have an ace. In the poker game of pitching, Bob Lemon's team is holding a throwaway hand.

The fact is, the Sox have been depending on raw power hitting all season and they've been doing fairly well, thank you. And in some cases — Frankie Barrios and the late, lamented Chris Knapp, for instance — the power has made the pitching look good. Not everybody can blow a six-run lead, even with a nine-inning head start.

THE WHITE SOX hitting has been adequate to the task, covering up a vital lack of pitching. Home runs have been flying off their bats, hit by people who never so much as raised a muffled whelp of offense in the majors. Why no one has ordered an investigation is a real mystery.

Incredibly, the White Sox are the talk of the American League and, even more incredibly, they are outdrawing the Cubs in a predominantly Cub town.

How are they doing it? With mirrors?

Not exactly. But there is no logical explanation for the sudden home run predilections of Eric Soderholm, Oscar Gamble, Alan Bannister, Jim Essian and even Ralph Garr. The South Side Goons are hitting homers out of spacious Comiskey Park at a record pace.

AND NOTHING SEEMED to be able to stop them. Not star pitchers, certainly. Then they did it themselves. The Sox stopped themselves.

They finally acknowledged what they never should have acknowledged. They admitted they had no use for pitching. They could win without it.

It was arrogance of the worst kind. It was straight out of classic Greek tragedy. The White Sox' tragic flaw finally caught up with them.

The ultimate manifestation of their conceit was the seemingly innocent act of bowing to the crowd after home runs. They were pleasing the fans but at the same time they were offending the opposing players.

BUT WORST OF ALL the Sox hitters were offending their own pitchers. They were saying to them that they, as hitters, have no use for pitchers.

You have to understand that pitchers and hitters — even on the same team — survive in a kind of vacuum. They tolerate each other and that's all. Hitters make their living by beating the brains out of pitchers. And pitchers put food on the table by baffling, embarrassing, and bamboozling the hitters.

There is a definite conflict of purpose when it comes to pitchers and hitters.

What this means, of course, is that every successful baseball team must strike a reasonable balance between its pitchers and hitters. No team can emphasize pitching to the detriment of hitting. A manager can never suggest that his team could survive on their hitting — or pitching — alone.

WHEN AN IMBALANCE occurs, one of two things can follow. First, petty jealousies can begin to tear the team apart. This will happen to the best of them.

Second, one faction can begin to let up, perhaps quite unconsciously. Perhaps even unnoticeably, the pitchers, for instance, will start throwing the ball into the hitters' court, rationalizing that the hitters have the game under control.

This is obviously what has happened to the Sox. The pitchers have come to expect that the hitters can do anything. They have heard the hitters say over and over that all the pitchers have to do is hold the other team close. That kind of talk is bad for the pitchers' confidence and bad for their egos.

Meanwhile, the hitters are seeing the pitchers fall apart and they go to the plate with extra pressure on their heads.

ONLY ONE SOLUTION seems feasible at this time if the Sox still hope to win a pennant. The hitters need to apologize for their arrogant behavior. They need to clear the air.

At the same time they can rid the A.L. of anti-Sox sentiment and reassure Sox pitchers that tipping the cap shouldn't be taken personally.

After all, to Sox batters a pitcher is a pitcher. Who looks at the uniform? Who even opens his eyes?

Big Ten football teams launch drills

Big Ten Conference football teams have been assembling this week in fall camps to prepare for Sept. 10 season openers which feature eight squads engaged in four league games plus intersectional home debuts for Ohio State and Minnesota.

The Hawkeyes of Iowa got into battle gear first for the photographers' eye on Monday with Press and Picture Day, a pre-practice session hosted by each of the schools for area reporters to meet coaches and players. Iowa then began its three days of non-contact drills as prescribed by the NCAA on Tuesday.

Illinois, Indiana and Purdue opened with Photo Day Wednesday and practice Thursday. Michigan, Michigan State, Minnesota and Northwestern pose for cameras Saturday and hit the gridiron Monday, while Ohio State and Wisconsin undergo the double duties of photo and practice sessions on Monday. Following the first three days of exercises, squad members will begin contact play.

A PAIR OF new coaches and some potentially new power will be put to the test this season. Illinois, under first-year head coach Gary Moeller, posts one of the earlier practice schedules with the Illini opening Aug. 18. Even though Moeller's a front runner in getting his practices started, some feel the former Michigan assistant is already well-prepared for his home opener against the Wolverines. As Michigan mentor Bo Schembechler mused at the Big Ten Kickoff Luncheon, "I see Gary's studying our press book, but I think he might already be ready for us," quipped Schembechler. "After all, he's been scouting Michigan for the past eight years!"

Purdue also sports a new head coach in Jim Young, who's anxious to install a more balanced attack and challenge Michigan State's hold on the Big Ten passing game. That challenge gets a quick answer in the season premier at East Lansing.

Even though prognosticators are going with Michigan and Ohio State to battle for the league crown, the race may be even more exciting than last season when four teams tied for third place and three others were a game behind that quartet. Two of the main contenders are Wisconsin and Indiana, which open fire on each other at Bloomington following the blast of the first whistle. Northwestern at Iowa could also prove to be one of those first games that "really count in the standings!"

FOR THOSE who like football with an intersectional flavor, Minnesota and Ohio state host Western Michigan and Miami, Fla., respectively. That leads off an interconference schedule packed with high-ranking independents, conference contenders and perennial bowl participants. While Western Michigan is one of the favorites in the Mid-American Conference and Miami Fla. is a leading independent, those games are appetizers to the tasty displays ahead.

Highly-regarded independent Notre Dame plays at Purdue and hosts Michigan State, Oklahoma and Nebraska, which have won or tied for 30 of the last 32 Big Eight titles and ranked fifth and ninth in the final poll last year, are on Big Ten schedules as the Sooners travel to Ohio State in a key nationally televised game on Sept. 24 while the Cornhuskers host Indiana, Oct. 1. A Pacific Eight Conference leader, UCLA plays at Minnesota Sept. 24 and hosts Iowa on Oct. 1.

ing in place of starter Dennis Droiet.

Walker got the third out with runs at first and third. The strikeout pleased Meyer.

"That was probably the biggest out of the tournament for us," he said. "It stopped Rock Island's rally and then we came back to score three runs in the next inning."

A three-run bloop single by Walker gave Arlington an 8-4 bulge, one that was needed when Rock Island came back with three runs in the ninth before Walker shut them off with his seventh strikeout in 2 1/3 innings.

DEPTH BECAME Rock Island's biggest enemy as the tourney moved along. After winning two games, they were eliminated by Granite City, 3-1.

With a roster of only 11 players, the problem was clearly visible in the game that dropped Rock Island from the competition. One of their baserunners pulled a leg muscle going to first, but he had to stay in the game because there was nobody on the bench to replace him.

With Arlington, depth is not a major concern, especially in pitching. Starters Kevin McBride, Bob Huber, Doug Harth, Dennis Droiet and John Mertins along with reliever Walker give Meyer a lot to work with. This will be an important factor to watch when Arlington begins play in the regionals.

At that level, most teams should be well-equipped. The representatives from five Midwest states will provide another challenge for Arlington hopes.

Each game will become a little tougher, but each victory will mean a lot more.

Big Ten football teams launch drills

Big Ten Conference football teams have been assembling this week in fall camps to prepare for Sept. 10 season openers which feature eight squads engaged in four league games plus intersectional home debuts for Ohio State and Minnesota.

The Hawkeyes of Iowa got into battle gear first for the photographers' eye on Monday with Press and Picture Day, a pre-practice session hosted by each of the schools for area reporters to meet coaches and players. Iowa then began its three days of non-contact drills as prescribed by the NCAA on Tuesday.

Illinois, Indiana and Purdue opened with Photo Day Wednesday and practice Thursday. Michigan, Michigan State, Minnesota and Northwestern pose for cameras Saturday and hit the gridiron Monday, while Ohio State and Wisconsin undergo the double duties of photo and practice sessions on Monday. Following the first three days of exercises, squad members will begin contact play.

A PAIR OF new coaches and some potentially new power will be put to the test this season. Illinois, under first-year head coach Gary Moeller, posts one of the earlier practice schedules with the Illini opening Aug. 18. Even though Moeller's a front runner in getting his practices started, some feel the former Michigan assistant is already well-prepared for his home opener against the Wolverines. As Michigan mentor Bo Schembechler mused at the Big Ten Kickoff Luncheon, "I see Gary's studying our press book, but I think he might already be ready for us," quipped Schembechler. "After all, he's been scouting Michigan for the past eight years!"

Purdue also sports a new head coach in Jim Young, who's anxious to install a more balanced attack and challenge Michigan State's hold on the Big Ten passing game. That challenge gets a quick answer in the season premier at East Lansing.

Even though prognosticators are going with Michigan and Ohio State to battle for the league crown, the race may be even more exciting than last season when four teams tied for third place and three others were a game behind that quartet. Two of the main contenders are Wisconsin and Indiana, which open fire on each other at Bloomington following the blast of the first whistle. Northwestern at Iowa could also prove to be one of those first games that "really count in the standings!"

FOR THOSE who like football with an intersectional flavor, Minnesota and Ohio state host Western Michigan and Miami, Fla., respectively. That leads off an interconference schedule packed with high-ranking independents, conference contenders and perennial bowl participants. While Western Michigan is one of the favorites in the Mid-American Conference and Miami Fla. is a leading independent, those games are appetizers to the tasty displays ahead.

Highly-regarded independent Notre Dame plays at Purdue and hosts Michigan State, Oklahoma and Nebraska, which have won or tied for 30 of the last 32 Big Eight titles and ranked fifth and ninth in the final poll last year, are on Big Ten schedules as the Sooners travel to Ohio State in a key nationally televised game on Sept. 24 while the Cornhuskers host Indiana, Oct. 1. A Pacific Eight Conference leader, UCLA plays at Minnesota Sept. 24 and hosts Iowa on Oct. 1.

ing in place of starter Dennis Drolet.

Walker got the third out with run- at first and third. The strikeout pleased Meyer.

"That was probably the biggest out of the tournament for us," he said. "It stopped Rock Island's rally and then we came back to score three runs in the next inning."

A three-run bloop single by Walker gave Arlington an 8-4 bulge, one that was needed when Rock Island came back with three runs in the ninth before Walker shut them off with his seventh strikeout in 2 1/3 innings.

DEPTH BECAME Rock Island's biggest enemy as the tourney moved along. After winning two games, they were eliminated by Granite City, 3-1.

With a roster of only 11 players, the problem was clearly visible in the game that dropped Rock Island from the competition. One of their baserunners pulled a leg muscle going to first, but he had to stay in the game because there was nobody on the bench to replace him.

With Arlington, depth is not a major concern, especially in pitching. Starters Kevin McBride, Bob Huber, Doug Harth, Dennis Drolet and John Mertins along with reliever Walker give Meyer a lot to work with. This will be an important factor to watch when Arlington begins play in the regionals.

At that level, most teams should be well-equipped. The representatives from five Midwest states will provide another challenge for Arlington hopes.

Each game will become a little tougher, but each victory will mean a lot more.

Foster assults hallowed mark

by PHIL ELDERKIN

George Foster of the Cincinnati Reds, the man who still has a shot at breaking Hack Wilson's National League record of 56 home runs in a single season, doesn't want to talk about it. George says he's tired of newspapermen coming up to him all the time and asking essentially the same questions about his hitting ability

Wilson, who resembled a fire hydrant at 5 ft. 6 in. and 190 pounds, set his home run record in 1930 with the Chicago Cubs. He also set another record that year that may never be broken — the all time major league high of 190 runs batted in.

GEORGE FOSTER

Foster is more what Central Casting would select for a home run king — a sleek 6 ft 2 in., right-handed hitter with a greyhound body and shoulders that look as though he had forgotten to take the wooden hanger out of his sports coat. He also has pre-cast steel wrists and a 30-inch waist.

ONLY BY REFUSING to take "no" for an answer can one get George to discuss the hitting style that allowed him to lead the National League last year in RBIs with a total of 121 and then hit .429 against the New York Yankees in the World Series.

George uses a 35-ounce bat to let the air out of the baseball and it is one of the heaviest in the major leagues

"The idea isn't to swing for the home run, but to hit the ball hard every time up and hope it goes where nobody can catch it," Foster explained. "I'm a .300 hitter because I'm consistent and a home run hitter because I have power.

"That's the difference between me and other long-ball hitters," he continued. "They don't make good contact every time up the way I do, and it kills their overall average. That's what I mean by being consistent."

What about that heavy bat?

"A BAT WITH a lot of wood in it makes it easier for anyone to hit the ball harder and that's what it's all about," Foster said. "I might make a little adjustment in my stance or in the position of my hands if the pitcher is doing something differently, but basically I'm going to hit the same way all the time."

With more than six weeks left in the season, George has slugged 39 home runs and hit two or more in eight games. The National League record for multi-home run games in one year is 10, set by Ralph Kiner of the Pittsburgh Pirates back in 1947.

Foster has the upper torso of a light-heavyweight boxing champion, his face the chiseled look of a bronze bust, and his legs are fast enough to get him 10 extra hits a year on bunts — if he were so inclined.

The fact that he one-hands everything hit to him in the outfield doesn't make him any different than most of today's players — except that he hot-dogs it more than most. He often seems moody and distant in interviews. And I've had him walk into the trainer's room on me — off limits to newspapermen — so that he wouldn't have to continue our conversation.

WHEN CINCINNATI'S batting coach Ted Kluszewski was asked how much he thought Foster wanted Wilson's home run record, he replied:

"Oh, I think he wants it pretty badly, only you'll never get him to admit it because that's the way he is. Physically George has always had the ability to be one of the best hitters in baseball, but I don't think he began to believe in himself mentally until two years ago.

"You know, George didn't always use that 35-ounce bat," Kluszewski continued. "And if he thinks that makes him a better hitter, he should stay with it. But the thing that makes any man with his physical equipment a tough out at the plate isn't what kind of bat he swings. It's when he starts believing that no pitcher can consistently stop him."

ONCE THE SEASON starts, Foster (who is partly into karate because he says it helps his concentration) is not a slave to the batting cage the way most hitters are.

"It takes a certain amount of strength even in practice to hit a baseball well, so why waste it," George said. "As long as my timing is OK, the only place I'm going to push myself is on the field."

Can Foster hit 56 or even 50 home runs?

"George will go to bat enough times to have a real shot at it," Kluszewski said. "But if he gets close and pitchers tighten up on him, he'll have to make the most of every opportunity. Otherwise, he won't make it."

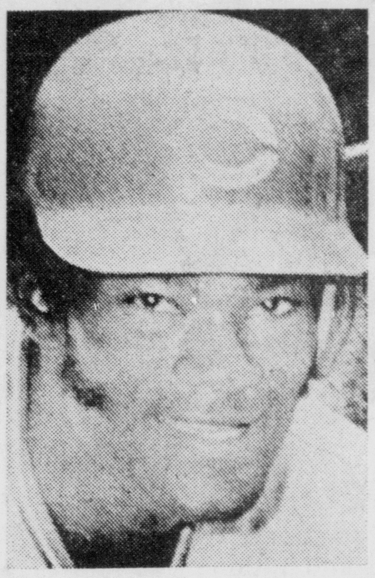
Wilson's 56 homers is target

Foster assults hallowed mark

by PHIL ELDERKIN

George Foster of the Cincinnati Reds, the man who still has a shot at breaking Hack Wilson's National League record of 56 home runs in a single season, doesn't want to talk about it. George says he's tired of newspapermen coming up to him all the time and asking essentially the same questions about his hitting ability.

Wilson, who resembled a fire hydrant at 5 ft. 6 in. and 190 pounds, set his home run record in 1930 with the Chicago Cubs. He also set another record that year that may never be broken — the all time major league high of 190 runs batted in.



GEORGE FOSTER

Foster is more what Central Casting would select for a home run king — a sleek 6 ft. 2 in., right-handed hitter with a greyhound body and shoulders that look as though he had forgotten to take the wooden hanger out of his sports coat. He also has pre-cast steel wrists and a 30-inch waist.

ONLY BY REFUSING to take "no" for an answer can one get George to discuss the hitting style that allowed him to lead the National League last year in RBIs with a total of 121 and then hit .429 against the New York Yankees in the World Series.

George uses a 35-ounce bat to let the air out of the baseball and it is one of the heaviest in the major leagues.

"The idea isn't to swing for the home run, but to hit the ball hard every time up and hope it goes where nobody can catch it," Foster explained. "I'm a .300 hitter because I'm consistent and a home run hitter because I have power.

"That's the difference between me and other long-ball hitters," he continued. "They don't make good contact every time up the way I do, and it kills their overall average. That's what I mean by being consistent."

What about that heavy bat?

"A BAT WITH a lot of wood in it makes it easier for anyone to hit the ball harder and that's what it's all about," Foster said. "I might make a little adjustment in my stance or in the position of my hands if the pitcher is doing something differently, but basically I'm going to hit the same way all the time."

With more than six weeks left in the season. George has slugged 39 home runs and hit two or more in eight games. The National League record for multi-home run games in one year is 10, set by Ralph Kiner of the Pittsburgh Pirates back in 1947.

Foster has the upper torso of a light-heavyweight boxing champion, his face the chiseled look of a bronze bust, and his legs are fast enough to get him 10 extra hits a year on bunts — if he were so inclined.

The fact that he one-hands everything hit to him in the outfield doesn't make him any different than most of today's players — except that he hotdogs it more than most. He often seems moody and distant in interviews. And I've had him walk into the trainer's room on me — off limits to newspapermen — so that he wouldn't have to continue our conversation.

WHEN CINCINNATI'S batting coach Ted Kluszewski was asked how much he thought Foster wanted Wilson's home run record, he replied:

"Oh, I think he wants it pretty badly, only you'll never get him to admit it because that's the way he is. Physically George has always had the ability to be one of the best hitters in baseball, but I don't think he began to believe in himself mentally until two years ago.

"You know, George didn't always use that 35-ounce bat," Kluszewski continued. "And if he thinks that makes him a better hitter, he should stay with it. But the thing that makes any man with his physical equipment a tough out at the plate isn't what kind of bat he swings. It's when he starts believing that no pitcher can consistently stop him."

ONCE THE SEASON starts, Foster (who is partly into karate because he says it helps his concentration) is not a slave to the batting cage the way most hitters are.

"It takes a certain amount of strength even in practice to hit a baseball well, so why waste it," George said. "As long as my timing is OK, the only place I'm going to push myself is on the field."

Can Foster hit 56 or even 50 home runs?

"George will go to bat enough times to have a real shot at it," Kluszewski said. "But if he gets close and pitchers tighten up on him, he'll have to make the most of every opportunity. Otherwise, he won't make it."

Behind-the-scenes action is race track clockwork

by DON FRISKE

Arlington Park 50th anniversary

On six days of almost every summer week, post time at Arlington Park is 2 p.m. for the first race. Barring tornadoes, monsoons or any other natural disaster, the horses are shuffled into the starting gate.

Just minutes later, an afternoon of betting, lucky or frustrating, has begun for thousands of spectators. The big show at Arlington Park is staged on the oval track with the horses pounding their hoofs into the homestretch amidst the cheers and shouts of railbirds.

But beneath and behind the massive section of stands, small scenes are happening every day, scenes that have followed the same script for so long that their actors play the roles in an almost instinctive manner.

FOR THE hundreds of track employes, this is a most important point. As the opening race approaches each day, they must have their jobs under control, running smoothly enough so that nothing distracts the viewers' eyes from the odds and the horses to which they are affiliated.

Looking for their horse as it heads for the starting gate, bettors may overlook the bearded man with the black hat who is in control of the horses. Vince DiMao, the outrider, has been responsible for getting each race started during the last 14 years.

"I have to get the horses to the starting gate at post time for each race," he said with a self-assured smile. "I have to retrieve any runaways so that they don't run too far and get disqualified.

"As the horses are loading into the gate, I position myself in front of it. If one breaks away, I have to catch it with my horse, one of the fastest I've been on."

TO KEEP HIS horse in top condition, DiMao's day begins at 4:30 a.m. By 6 a.m., he is at the track, patrolling the backstretch in case any accident occurs during dawn workouts.

At 10 a.m., training is over for the morning, which gives DiMao some time to work with his two horses. A few hours later, the outrider uniform must be on.

"We can sit out there for a week, and nothing will happen," he explained. "Then one day, two or three horses could break loose. You can't predict what will happen. Most of our activity seems to be in the early part of the day. Much more happens during the earlier races."

Although the maintenance of his two horses takes a small portion of DiMao's work day, it is a significant portion. The horses must be sharp or the job becomes futile.

TRAINER ENOCH Rea knows all about the upkeep of speedy thoroughbreds. Since 1933, he has worked with them, and now he has 29 unde his control, which he thinks is too many. Among them is Mariuel's Troy, one of the top Illinois bred horses, and Dewan Keys, a two-year-old that was bought for $175,000 as a yearling.

"I was trading horses when I was 13, and I was cheated a lot of times," said the 74-year-old. "They don't all train the same. Some require more work than others."

Getting out of bed at 5 a.m. each morning, Rea begins his training chores an hour later. Fifteen minutes after Rea starts his job, jockey Bobby Breen is also working with the horses.

"I work with the ones I'll be riding in the races that are coming up," Breen said. "The morning sessions keep you fit. You don't want to get lazy."

THE 25-YEAR-OLD jockey, who has been racing for seven years, rides in an average of four or five races each day.

Those races are arranged by the office where Terry Meyocks, the assistant racing secretary, begins each day at 7 a.m. Vital statistics on each of the 1,980 race horses on Arlington's grounds are kept in a large filing system, referred to as "The Brain."

Meyocks helps to cagegorize the horses so that they can be put in races against opponents with comparable abilities.

"You have to keep the horsemen happy so you can't let better horses run against average ones," he said. "For every horse on the grounds, there should be a spot to run at least once every 10 days. We try to make the races even.

"THE TRAINERS bring in the horses' papers and then we break them down into categories, putting the horses where we want them to fit."

It is a complicated task, considering all the possible variations of both races and horses. But Meyocks is familiar with those things. His father is a jockey agent.

"I've been raised on it, more or less. It helps to know the horsemen. You have to keep friends," he said.

Maintaining friendly atmospheres is also a big part of Al Silverstein's job. As head of Arlington Park's concession, Silverstein has to keep all people happy.

AT 8:45 A.M. each weekday, Silverstein is racing around the underbody of the track's grandstands, checking all of his departments. When everything is in order, he assigns girls to concession stands, 32 on weekdays and about twice that number on Saturdays.

By 12:30 p.m., he has to check in at Wayne Williams learns more about job hazards

Loren Tate

CHAMPAIGN — When University of Illinois football coach Bob Blackman saw the handwriting on the wall ahead of the Northwestern game last fall, he called end coach Wayne Williams into his office and apologized for drawing Williams into a job-losing situation.

"We could all see it coming," noted Williams last week. "But I was honest when I told coach Blackman that I enjoyed my experience at Illinois. I always wanted to coach at the state university and I'm glad I received the opportunity.

"We all know the hazards of this business. I came in with my eyes open."

AT THE TIME, the husky southern Illinoisan, who once played under an assistant coach named Vince Lombardi with the New York Giants, wasn't really concerned about being cast into a bread line.

In fact, he had received an assurance from Cecil Coleman that the UI athletic director would recommend that he be retained, and rumors abounded that he and line coach Carl Meyer would be kept on the new staff.

Six years earlier similar rumors circulated with regard to Ellis Rainsberger and J. C. Caroline when Blackman came in, and that's the way it turned out.

BUT NOT THIS time. New coach Gary Moeller, instituting a youth movement unprecedented in the Big 10, had other ideas about veteran staff personnel.

Moeller retained only Bruce Hoffman, the youngest of Blackman's permanent corps.

"I hadn't thought about my age (42) at all until Moeller asked me if I would mind working for a younger man. When he brought it up a second time, I began to realize it might be a factor in his decision," said Williams.

"I'VE ALWAYS operated on the theory that coaches get smarter as they become more experienced. I guess everybody else doesn't feel that way."

Williams, who last month returned to the southern Illinois prep ranks at Alton, acknowledges his disappointment over the turn of events.

"It wasn't so much that I didn't get rehired," he explains, "as the way it happened. One day I was receiving assurances from all sides. Coleman told me not to get involved with the Illinois State job until I talked to him. Then all of a sudden, I never heard from Coleman or anyone, except for a notice to turn in my car and a bill for $8 in telephone expenses.

"I CAN AFFORD the $8 (Williams has been making extraordinary wages as a construction foreman) but it kind of hit me wrong. Coleman asked me to speak at two Illini alumni affairs after Blackman had been fired and I agreed to do so. Many of these events I attended on my vacation time. I felt I had done enough for the university that an $8 credit card bill could be overlooked."

Several former UI aides were upset by these phone bills, which accrued after the athletic director ordered them to cease using their credit cards. Some bitter feelings developed as a result. Elroy Morand, now at Miami (Fla.), threatened legal action last month on his three-figure debt.

Such is the unfortunate atmosphere of a coaching change. Williams' departure was particularly hurtful because it ended one of the most pleasant coach alumni relationships in the state. Williams was becoming as popular in after-dinner engagements as Ray Eliot, and was cementing Illini relations in several trouble spots.

ONE OF THESE, incidentally, was Alton, where several fans recently celebrated Williams' hiring as the beginning of strong UI recruiting in that sector.

"Wait a minute," said Wayne. "That's the school that fired me, remember. Recruiting is someone else's problem now. I would never advise one of my high school athletes where to go to school."

Thus Williams, after three years on the college scene, returns to the other side of the fence. He and his wife, who will teach, will earn approximately $5,000 more than they received in Champaign-Urbana, and Wayne has a summer option to teach driver's education if he desires.

Packer backer unimpressed with Bears

I'm happy to see all of you Bear fans getting excited because you beat defending Super Bowl champion Oakland Saturday. It means that the Bears are better than Oakland, ergo, if the Bears beat the defending champs, they are obviously heirs to the throne. At least that's what you think. What a laugh.

How many of you Bear fans can name the Oakland quarterback to finish the game? What it all boils down to is a difference in philosophies of exhibition games between win-at-all-costs Jack Pardee and what-talent-do-we-have John Madden.

If Madden wanted to win the game, do you think he would have pulled Kenny Stabler after the first quarter when the lefthander completed 8-of-9? Madden saw what he wanted to see . . . The Snake tear the Bear defensive secondary apart. Madden proceeded to use every player on the Raider roster with the exception of two who were injured.

ON THE OTHER side of the field, you have Pardee who is juggling NFL-scarred Bob Avellini and Mike Phipps and trying to discover any difference between the two. The Bears must have been delirious when Phipps hit Randy Burks for the dramatic touchdown.

Beating a rookie safety (Steve Jackson) must have given Burks great satisfaction. It also must have been tremendously rewarding for Bears players Waymond Bryant and Allan Ellis who played the ENTIRE meaningless practice game.

I'm glad to see the Bears go so gung-ho. If they want to play their starters for the whole game in the preseason, they'll be tired and ripe for beating during the regular season.

The Pack is Back, you watch.

BACKS THE BEARS

The Bears are for real. They proved that without doubt Saturday against Oakland. They controlled the scrimmage lines and played good defense, too. My favorite player is Doug Buffone. The Bears will be much stronger when he is back at his linebacker position.

Packer backer unimpressed with Bears

I'm happy to see all of you Bear fans getting excited because you beat defending Super Bowl champion Oakland Saturday. It means that the Bears are better than Oakland, ergo, if the Bears beat the defending champs, they are obviously heirs to the throne. At least that's what you think. What a laugh.

How many of you Bear fans can name the Oakland quarterback to finish the game? What it all boils down to is a difference in philosophies of exhibition games between win-at-all-costs Jack Pardee and what-talent-do-we-have John Madden.

If Madden wanted to win the game, do you think he would have pulled Kenny Stabler after the first quarter when the lefthander completed 8-of-9? Madden saw what he wanted to see . . . "The Snake" tear the Bear defensive secondary apart. Madden proceeded to use every player on the Raider roster with the exception of two who were injured.

ON THE OTHER side of the field, you have Pardee who is juggling NFL-scarred Bob Avellini and Mike Phipps and trying to discover any difference between the two. The Bears must have been delirious when Phipps hit Randy Burks for the dramatic touchdown.

Beating a rookie safety (Steve Jackson) must have given Burks great satisfaction. It also must have been tremendously rewarding for Bears players Waymond Bryant and Allan Ellis who played the ENTIRE meaningless practice game.

I'm glad to see the Bears go so gung-ho. If they want to play their starters for the whole game in the preseason, they'll be tired and ripe for beating during the regular season.

The Pack is Back, you watch.

BACKS THE BEARS

The Bears are for real. They proved that without doubt Saturday against Oakland. They controlled the scrimmage lines and played good defense, too. My favorite player is Doug Buffone. The Bears will be much stronger when he is back at his linebacker position.

Taggers take two titles in softball

Direction Sports offers new hope for youngsters

Jim Murray

Can you teach history with a baseball bat? Hitler may have tried it, but we're not talking about the Gestapo or the rubber hose theory of instruction.

Can you teach math with a football? Grammar with a basketball? Can you learn citizenship in a rundown play?

Historically, it was thought the only thing you could learn from football practice was two letters of the alphabet — X's and O's. For some players, this would be an improvement of one letter.

It's doubtful if baseball improved Babe Ruth's erudition. The secrets of physics were safe from him, save those that had to do with solving the curving ball.

BUT ONE OF the realities of sports is that more kids learn to compound fractions figuring out the batting averages of their idols than ever did figuring out that if Farmer John had 5½ apples and his wife had 3¼, how many apples would Farmer John have?

Decimals were no problem to a kid computing Tom Terrific's earned-run average. Kids absorbed more geometry figuring out the carom in right field or the shortest route to a first down or the dimensions of the key and the three-second rule on the basketball court than they ever did from studying isosceles triangles or the area of parallelograms.

Kids who wouldn't give a hoot for "see John run" would sit up and pay attention if you said "see O. J. run." Instead of asking them how many apples Farmer John had, ask them how many first downs Lawrence McCutcheon had.

TULLEY BROWN, son of a banker, thought he could take this absorption with the math and literature of sport and move it one degree further. Learning didn't have to be like castor oil. A kid who didn't know the multiplication table could compute to the nearest hundredth how many yards the Rams would have to average per play to score.

Brown hired a floating squad of sports-oriented teachsrs, and headed into the inner city with a program he dubbed Direction Sports. His program was sort of a pay now, play later, which is to say the kids would be given scholastic problems to solve before being allowed to suit up. "("Use two words to form one word — what? 'Pig' 'Skin'? Very good! Go to halfback!")

A kid will do anything to get a few swings at bat or to go to the free-throw line or to go out for a long one on the football field. The program was so successful, it was surprising no one ever thought of it before. The beneficiary was not only the kids, but the community.

Eight years ago, when the program was young, so was Robert Garrett: Robert was a chunky tough guy, and had a rapsheet that would have made Al Capone blush. Looking at it, you would figure that here was a 40-year-old two-time loser.

BUT ROBERT was only a 10-year-old, right out of "the projects," and his enemy was the world. Among other things, Robert was charged with interfering with an officer making an arrest. And Robert was the arrest. It wouldn't have been to hard to plot the rest of Robert's life. Destination: Folsom.

Direction Sports changed this itinerary. Picked up in the net DS. threw over the hard cases in the city schools and took out to the playgrounds, Robert was in the middle of it, biting and scratching. Tulley Brown hired a tough middle linebacker from USC, Britte Lee, and the first thing you knew Robert Garrett decided he would rather be a coach than a convict. Robert became All-City, instead of Most-Wanted.

I talked to Robert the other night. Now 18, he will shortly leave for Concordia (Neb.) College on a football scholarship, but he is, in the meantime, working with a coach straightening out other young Roberts from the projects. What had Direction Sports meant to him? "It gave me someplace to like myself," he says quietly, "to quit being a little boy all my life."

THE PROGRAM has had such heady success, it is this week going out to 14 other major cities with ghetto problems. They want to multiply the Robert Garretts by 100,000. The program has the approval of all four major sports commissioners — Ziegler in hockey, Kuhn in baseball, O'Brien in basketball and Rozelle in football. More importantly, it has the endorsement of thousands of mothers who can now say "My son, the coach" instead of "My son, the crook." And it makes life Direction Sports — and not Direction Penitentiary.

Sutter visits Santa Fe for weekend attraction

Bruce Sutter, Chicago Cubs star relief pitcher, will be honored Saturday night, Aug. 20, at Santa Fe Speedway, 91st and Wolf Road in Willow Springs.

Sutter will sign autographs and talk to spectators at the southwest side of the clay oval. His appearance will take place during the intermission of Saturday's regular stock car program. Thirty-lap late model and 25-lap sportsman main events are featured in the 11-event program.

Another regular quarter-mile clay oval show is set for Sunday night, Aug. 21. Starting times for both shows is 8 p.m. with time trials coming one hour before the first race.

On Friday night, Aug. 19, Santa Fe Speedway presents "Tournament of Destruction," featuring unique team demolition races. The card will present a figure eight skirmish, powder puff battles, and unpredictable spectator races.

Friday's show highlights eight teams of professional auto wreckers trying to survive for five laps in elimination-basis competition.

The "Crunch-a-Bunch" quartets, with strategy ranging from head-on crashes to a more subtle "spin-outs," will attempt any on-the-ground maneuver to win.

A typical team "demo derby" contest features cars flying all over the track and infield, autos backwards at full speed, on a speedway of compacted smoky cars. At the checkered flag, the only moving objects you'll probably see will be the winning car itself and the two trucks.

Santa Fe Speedway's team demo competition features fearless four-man auto smashers led by the "Missing Links," a veteran crew of fender-benders. Other teams competing this year include "The Pink Panthers," "Locomotive," "White Lightning," and "The Mean Green Machine."

Lightning-quick American Motorcyclist Association - sanctioned events are featured on Wednesday night at the Speedway.

Bow hunters hold third jamboree in Bolingbrook

The Chicago Bow Hunters will host the third annual Illinois Archery Assn. Bow Hunter Jamboree, on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 20-21, in Bolingbrook, Ill.

The jamboree site is located one-half mile east of Route 53 on Boughton Road at Ashbury Road. All attending should watch for the green and white signs.

There will be 36 targets for archers to shoot as well as long distance and novelty targets. There will also be archery displays, hunting and archery booths, and "YE OLDE SHOPPE," where used archery, hunting and fishing equipment can be bought and sold.

Camping is available at the range and can be reserved by calling Mr. Jim Wickert at 896-1566 or Bob Fruwirth at 545-3043.

During both evenings, a bow hunter safety course will be held by certified instructors. In the future, most states might require safety certificates before licenses are issued.

Shooting fees for adults will be $3.00 for the first round and $2.00 for each additional round.

For children, a $2.00 fee will cover the first round and $1.00 for each additional round with a maximum of $10.00 for a family group. Trophies will be awarded to the winners.

Direction Sports offers new hope for youngsters

Jim Murray

Can you teach history with a baseball bat? Hitler may have tried it, but we're not talking about the Gestapo or the rubber hose theory of instruction.

Can you teach math with a football? Grammar with a basketball? Can you learn citizenship in a rundown play?

Historically, it was thought the only thing you could learn from football practice was two letters of the alphabet — X's and O's. For some players, this would be an improvement of one letter.

It's doubtful if baseball improved Babe Ruth's erudition. The secrets of physics were safe from him, save those that had to do with solving the curving ball.

BUT ONE OF the realities of sports is that more kids learn to compound fractions figuring out the batting averages of their idols than ever did figuring out that if Farmer John had 5½ apples and his wife had 3¼, how many apples would Farmer John have?

Decimals were no problem to a kid computing Tom Terrific's earned-run average. Kids absorbed more geometry figuring out the carom in right field or the shortest route to a first down or the dimensions of the key and the three-second rule on the basketball court than they ever did from studying isosceles triangles or the area of parallelograms.

Kids who wouldn't give a hoot for "see John run" would sit up and pay attention if you said "see O. J. run." Instead of asking them how many apples Farmer John had, ask them how many first downs Lawrence McCutcheon had.

TULLEY BROWN, son of a banker, thought he could take this absorption with the math and literature of sport and move it one degree further. Learning didn't have to be like castor oil. A kid who didn't know the multiplication table could compute to the nearest hundredth how many yards the Rams would have to average per play to score.

Brown hired a floating squad of sports-oriented teachsrs, and headed into the inner city with a program he dubbed Direction Sports. His program was sort of a pay now, play later, which is to say the kids would be given scholastic problems to solve before being allowed to suit up. "("Use two words to form one word — what? 'Pig' 'Skin'? Very good! Go to halfback!")

A kid will do anything to get a few swings at bat or to go to the free-throw line or to go out for a long one on the football field. The program was so successful, it was surprising no one ever thought of it before. The beneficiary was not only the kids, but the community.

Eight years ago, when the program was young, so was Robert Garrett. Robert was a chunky tough guy, and had a rapsheet that would have made Al Capone blush. Looking at it, you would figure that here was a 40-year-old two-time loser.

BUT ROBERT was only a 10-year-old, right out of "the projects," and his enemy was the world. Among other things, Robert was charged with interfering with an officer making an arrest. And Robert was the arrest. It wouldn't have been to hard to plot the rest of Robert's life. Destination: Folsom.

Direction Sports changed this itinerary. Picked up in the net DS. threw over the hard cases in the city schools and took out to the playgrounds, Robert was in the middle of it, biting and scratching. Tulley Brown hired a tough middle linebacker from USC, Britte Lee, and the first thing you knew Robert Garrett decided he would rather be a coach than a convict. Robert became All-City, instead of Most-Wanted.

I talked to Robert the other night. Now 18, he will shortly leave for Concordia (Neb.) College on a football scholarship, but he is, in the meantime, working with a coach straighting out other young Roberts from the projects. What had Direction Sports meant to him½ "It gave me someplace to like myself," he says quietly, "to quit being a little boy all my life."

THE PROGRAM has had such heady success, it is this week going out to 14 other major cities with ghetto problems. They want to multiply the Robert Garretts by 100,000. Charles Hoffman, the parimutuel manager, is another Arlington Park employe who relies heavily on his working crew, which includes 500 clerks on Saturdays and holidays.

AT 9:30 A.M. each race day, Hoffman is in charge of what he calls "possibly one of the most efficient accounting systems of any business."

Hoffman is responsible for anything that pertains to money at the track.

"That's the entire operation," Hoffman said with solid pride in his voice. "Selling, cashing, the money rooms, they're all under my supervision."

He started in the business as a runner 52 years ago. In 1973, he got the job as manager.

"We never force a balance. We'll look for 10 cents to balance things," Hoffman said. "This job is like running a baseball team. You must have the right clerks in the right places. You're only as good as the key men you surround yourself with."

JOHN NEVILLE and Bill Schwider comprise a crew of two that are in charge of the television operations at Arlington. The job is closely tied to the betting aspect of the track.

The winners are paid according to the monitors that are watched by the clerks. Neville and Schwider deliver the pictures on the screens.

Schwider works the camera in the press box while Neville controls things in the computer room below the grandstands. At 10 a.m., they begin their day by making sure that the 80 monitors that speckle various parts of the track are in working order.

That's the concern of the many Arlington Park employes. Nobody notices their achievements unless things get out of working order.

LeBaron long on luxury

by DOYLE K. GETTER

Resurrecting an elegant name from its past, Chrysler's new 1977½ luxury intermediate, the LeBaron, is an interesting car with distinctive personality traits of its own.

It will be competing in the growing mid-size luxury car market that includes the established Cadillac Seville and the more recent Lincoln Versailles.

The LeBaron Medallion four-door sedan that I tested, base priced for $5,594, was fitted with a number of optional extras that boosted its list price to $7,153. There is also a LeBaron two-door coupe and a station wagon will be added to the line within a year.

THE SEDAN IS 206.1 inches long on a 112.7 inch wheelbase. The suspension — transverse torsion bar in front, multi-leaf springs in the rear — had been isolated from the car body to help deaden ride noises.

The ride is soft at normal speeds but it picks up a sort of rocking chair quality over uneven surfaces and the car leans noticably on fast cornering. In short, it's a new kind of ride for Chrysler's smaller cars, the kind of ride more often associated in the past with big car luxury transportation.

The computerized 318 cubic inch V-8 engine in the LeBaron is a second generation of Chrysler's "lean burn" concept that electronically adjusts the spark advance precisely for various driving conditions.

This is a dependable and peppy engine if kept in tune but its electronics may be too exotic for the corner mechanic who has not been trained in its maintenance.

WITH AIR conditioning on, I averaged 13.5 miles per gallon in normal city and suburban driving and 18.1 miles per gallon on the highway for 105 miles at 55 miles an hour.

It would accelerate, with its automatic transmission, from zero to 50 miles an hour in 9.2 seconds and from 30 to 50 miles an hour in 5.9 seconds.

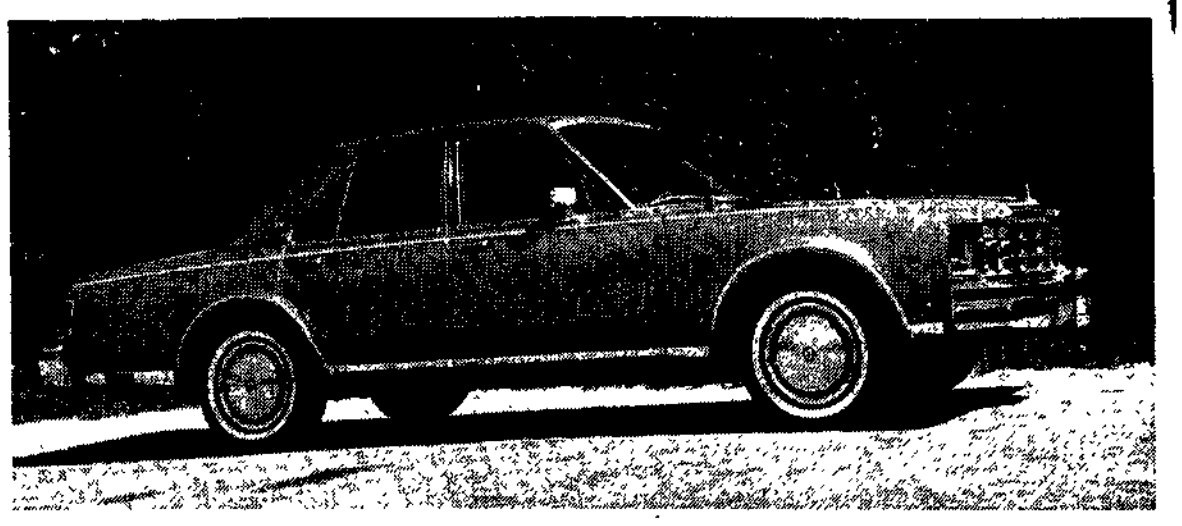
Interior dimensions of the LeBaron sedan are generally good by intermediate car standards. Front headroom, 39.2 inches, and front legroom, 42.5 inches, are generous in any car. Rear headroom, 37.5 inches, is better than most. Rear legroom, 36.8 inches, is adequate but not generous.

The base price of the LeBaron Medallion four-door sedan includes automatic transmission, power steering and power brakes with front discs, a split bench front seat and padded vinyl roof. A sun roof can be added optionally.

ALSO STANDARD were three roof-mounted assist handles and assist straps on all four doors, two vanity reading lamps for rear passengers, door courtesy lamps, dome lamp, map reading lamp, glove box lamp, trunk lamp, cigaret lighter lamp and instrument panel courtesy lamp.

The car has a 16.6 cubic foot trunk and a 19.5-gallon gasoline tank. It requires no-lead fuel.

The more important extra-cost options on the test car included air conditioning, automatic speed control, power windows, power door locks, AM-FM stereo radio, forged aluminum wheels and FR78x15 steel-belted radial tires. Glass belted radials are standard.



CHRYSLER'S ANSWER to the luxury intermediate line of automobiles that already includes the Cadillac Seville and the Lincoln Versailles is the LeBaron.

Cars thirsty for motor oil not uncommon

Doyle K. Getter

Your auto and you

Auto Column: I have a 1976 Mercury Monarch with the 302 V-8 that uses a quart of oil every 1,000 miles, The dealer says it's normal. I had the compression checked and although it was low, it was balanced. The car does not smoke nor is there a leak. If my car is normal, where is the quart going?

ROGER D. GOLDBACH, Arlington Heights, Ill.

Mr. Goldbach: All of today's engines run hotter than formerly because of pollution controls and leaner fuel mixtures. Because they run hotter, piston rings must be harder and valve and piston tolerances have had to be increased to prevent "freezing" of expanding metal parts. Your oil is being burned but in such tiny quantities on each compression stroke that you cannot see the smoke. A quart every 1,000 miles may be on the high side but it is well within the normal range.

Auto Column: Enjoy your columns. Could you tell us the meaning of "LTD" on certain Ford cars? Thank you.

JOHN E. WILLIAMS, DeBary, Fla.

Mr. Williams: These letters originally stood for "Luxury Tri Decor," a trim option on the 1965 Galaxie 500 models. Later, as Ford upgraded the Galaxie, LTD bxcame a separate model line and still later, a year ago, Ford renamed its intermediates LTD II.

Auto Column: My '71 Ford LTD was just refused an inspection sticker in Connecticut because the frame from rear wheel to bumper was badly rusted and soft. Why should a six year old car have this problem, especially a frame?

A. C. JOHNSON, Hampden, Mass.

Mr. Johnson: I took this up with a Ford representative who suggested that you ask your dealer to arrange for his district Ford service representative to inspect the rust damage on your car. Ford made no promises but, in my opinion, the problem is unusual.

Auto Column: We have a six cylinder 1977 Olds Cutlass. The car ran great for about 500 miles, then it began dying on us without warning. The dealer will adjust the carburetor and timing, it will run another 400 or so miles and then start dying again. Lately, when you hit the accelarator, it backfires. Do you have any idea what's wrong?

KENNETH G. TOWER, Morton, Ill.

Mr. Tower: You might have low pressure on the fuel pump or a bad fuel filter, either in the line or in the tank. If it occurs only when the engine is hot, sometimes the electronic module in the distributor will break down under heat.

Auto Column: I have a 1977 Cordoba with a "lean burn" 400 cubic inch V-8. At idle the engine runs rough and, with the air conditioner on, it is extremely rough at idle. I was told that the 400 lean burn does idle rough and there is no remedy. Is that so?

PAUL A. CORNELL, West Seneca, N.Y.

Mr. Cornell: The lean fuel mixture that emissions controls require is causing engines to idle more roughly than formerly but your problem would seem to be excessive. Adding the air conditioner would certainly increase the roughness. Engines are usually tuned and carburetors adjusted with the air conditioning off. Some mechanics are adjusting the carburetor with the air conditioning on and are claiming good results. You should try it but I should point out that it is illegal, under EPA rules, to adjust the carburetor that way.

The computerized 318 cubic inch V-8 engine in the LeBaron is a second generation of Chrysler's "lean burn" concept that electronically adjusts the spark advance precisely for various driving conditions.

This is a dependable and peppy engive if kept in tune but its electronics may be too exotic for the corner mechanic who has not been trained in its maintenance.

WITH AIR conditioning on, I averaged 13.5 miles per gallon in normal city and suburban driving and 18.1 miles per gallon on the highway for 105 miles at 55 miles an hour.

It would accelerate, with its automatic transmission, from zero to 50 miles an hour in 9.2 seconds and from 30 to 50 miles an hour in 5.9 seconds.

Interior dimensions of the LeBaron sedan are generally good by intermediate car standards. Front headroom, 39.2 inches, and front legroom, 42.5 inches, are generous in any car. Rear headroom, 37.5 inches, is better than most. Rear legroom, 36.8 inches, is adequate but not generous.

The base price of the LeBaron Medallion four-door sedan includes automatic transmission, power steering and power brakes with front discs, a split bench front seat and padded vinyl roof. A sun roof can be added optionally.

ALSO STANDARD were three roof-mounted assist handles and assist straps on all four doors, two vanity reading lamps for rear passengers, door courtesy lamps, dome lamp, map reading lamp, glove box lamp, trunk lamp, cigaret lighter lamp and instrument panel courtesy lamp.

The car has a 16.6 cubic foot trunk and a 19.5 gallon gasoline tank. It requires no-lead fuel.

The more important extra-cost options on the test car included air conditioning, automatic speed control, power windows, power door locks, AM-FM stereo radio, forged aluminum wheels and FR78x15 steel-belted radial tires. Glass belted radials are standard.

CHRYSLER'S ANSWER to the luxury intermediate line of automobiles that already includes the Cadillac Seville and the Lincoln Versailles is the LeBaron.

Cars thirsty for motor oil not uncommon

Doyle K. Getter

Your auto and you

Auto Column: I have a 1976 Mercury Monarch with the 302 V-8 that uses a quart of oil every 1,000 miles, The dealer says it's normal. I had the compression checked and although it was low, it was balanced. The car does not smoke nor is there a leak. If my car is normal, where is the quart going?

ROGER D. GOLDBACH, Arlington Heights, Ill.

Mr. Goldbach: All of today's engines run hotter than formerly because of pollution controls and leaner fuel mixtures. Because they run hotter, piston rings must be harder and valve and piston tolerances have had to be increased to prevent "freezing" of expanding metal parts. Your oil is being burned but in such tiny quantities on each compression stroke that you cannot see the smoke. A quart every 1,000 miles may be on the high side but it is well within the normal range.

Auto Column: Enjoy your columns. Could you tell us the meaning of "LTD" on certain Ford cars? Thank you.

JOHN E. WILLIAMS, DeBary, Fla.

Mr. Williams: These letters originally stood for "Luxury Tri Decor," a trim option on the 1965 Galaxie 500 models. Later, as Ford upgraded the Galaxie, LTD bxcame a separate model line and still later, a year ago, Ford renamed its intermediates LTD II.

Auto Column: My '71 Ford LTD was just refused an inspection sticker in Connecticut because the frame from rear wheel to bumper was badly rusted and soft. Why should a six year old car have this problem, especially a frame?

A. C. JOHNSON, Hampden, Mass.

Mr. Johnson: I took this up with a Ford representative who suggested that you ask your dealer to arrange for his district Ford service representative to inspect the rust damage on your car. Ford made no promises but, in my opinion, the problem is unusual.

Auto Column: We have a six cylinder 1977 Olds Cutlass. The car ran great for about 500 miles, then it began dying on us without warning. The dealer will adjust the carburetor and timing, it will run another 400 or so miles and then start dying again. Lately, when you hit the accelarator, it backfires. Do you have any idea what's wrong?

KENNETH G. TOWER, Morton, Ill.

Mr. Tower: You might have low pressure on the fuel pump or a bad fuel filter, either in the line or in the tank. If it occurs only when the engine is hot, sometimes the electronic module in the distributor will break down under heat.

Auto Column: I have a 1977 Cordoba with a "lean burn" 400 cubic inch V-8. At idle the engine runs rough and, with the air conditioner on, it is extremely rough at idle. I was told that the 400 lean burn does idle rough and there is no remedy. Is that so?

PAUL A. CORNELL, West Seneca, N.Y.

Mr. Cornell: The lean fuel mixture that emissions controls require is causing engines to idle more roughly than formerly but your problem would seem to be excessive. Adding the air conditioner would certainly increase the roughness. Engines are usually tuned and carburetors adjusted with the air conditioning off. Some mechanics are adjusting the carburetor with the air conditioning on and are claiming good results. You should try it but I should point out that it is illegal, under EPA rules, to adjust the carburetor that way.

The doctor says

Expect no miracles from eating yogurt

My questions concern yogurt. Since I love yogurt in gravies such as stroganoff, canned creamed soups and heated in many other ways can you tell me if the cultures (Lactobacilli Acidophilus and Bulgaricus) remain active and continue to help the lower intestines when yogurt is cooked? I note that acidophilus capsules must be kept cold. Since I would like to include these organisms in my diet and can use yogurt so many ways in cooking, I want to make sure I am getting the same benefit from yogurt in cooking as from eating it directly from the refrigerator in the container.

You are probably getting the same benefit from the organisms — cooked or uncooked — which is exactly nothing. The whole idea of eating yogurt for the colon began with an outstanding scientist for his time, Elie Metchnikoff, a Russian who became head of the Pasteur Institute and a Nobel prize winner.

His contributions to germ theory were the forerunners of modern knowledge of immune mechanisms. He was interested in aging and thought that "auto-intoxication" from the colon was an important factor in many people having their colons removed in the wave of interest in colons and disease that followed. He specifically recommended Lactobacillus bulgaricus yogurt to remove auto-intoxication from the colon, and the yogurt faddists multiplied.

The lactobacillus may change the acid-base balance in the colon which can affect the types of bacteria living there, but that is about all it does. It does not cure acne, prevent aging or even cure constipation.

The cultured yogurt with Lactobacillus bulgaricus usually has less lactose in it and enables it to be digested by lactose in tolerant people but most of the regular commercial yogurt in grocery stores is made differently and is often a very high lactose food. I am sending The Health Letter number 7-2, Milk Products: Good and Bad, to give you more information on lactose intolerance and milk products including yogurt. Others who want his issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

The concern about the bacteria in the colon is really misplaced. The digestive process of absorbing nutrients takes place in the small intestine — most of it in the first one to two feet just outside the stomach. The idea then that lactobacillus will improve digestion of milk is not on very firm ground. Milk is not digested in the colon at all. The whole game is over by the time food residue gets to the colon. The function of the colon is to regulate salt and water balance. It absorbs water when you need it and if it is irritated, you may have diarrhea because of its disturbed function in absorbing water.

If you enjoy yugurt, use it because you like it — cooked or cold — but don't expect any medical miracles from it either way.

Low-hung mirror fills child's need to preen

Kidstuff: A worthwhile purchase for your child's room is an inexpensive door mirror to be hung — low — on the closet door. Shop for one only when your youngster understands it's made of glass and can't be driven into with a truck or doll carriage. A little one should be able to admire himself in private, and strengthen his idea of himself as an individual. Also, it's better to let him see for himself that his hair needs combing or his face a washing. No longer will he need to scramble up to a dangerous perch on the wash basin to look at himself in the bathroom mirror. Pre-teens and even younger children need a chance to preen and parade before their own mirrors, too.

Dear Roberta: Is it true that since angel food cake is mainly air and egg whites, it's low in calories and a good high-protein dessert for dieters? — Bernice Daniel.

You're right that angel food is higher in protein and lower in fat than most cakes. So is sponge cake, because neither contains shortening. But low in calories compared to what? Even though it has about half the calories of chocolate layer cake, angel food ranks in that department about the same as ice cream — hardly a good choice for a dieter. Just as bad for slimming, angel food and sponge cakes have almost three times as much carbohydrate as ice cream has.

Victoria Luke-Wallace R. Wilson

A rainbow setting surrounded Victoria A. Luke of Arlington Heights and Wallace R. Wilson of Wheeling their July 24 wedding in St. Mary's Church, Buffalo Grove.

Each of Vicky's attendants was gowned in a pastel shade of chiffon and carried daisies and carnations tinted to match her ensemble.

Vicky, who has made her home with her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hironimus, wore a white chiffon gown trimmed in white lace and seed pearls, with a waist-length veil and lace crown, and carried white roses and orchids.

HER MAID OF honor, Susi Rouse, Schaumburg, wore green. Bridesmaids were Wally's sisters, Beth Rainer, Round Lake, Laurie Hauserman, Los Angeles, and Gwen Wilson, along with his cousin, Pat Estermara, Waterman, Ill. They wore apricot, yellow, blue and pink. Flower girl Patricia Hironimus, 6, the bride's niece, wore white chiffon with baby blue ribbon streamers.

Vicky's mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. John Melton of Altha, Fla., were in attendance at the afternoon festivities.

The groom, son of the Wallace Wilsons, chose Richard Lenth, Wheeling, as best man. Groomsmen included his brothers-in-law, Richard Rainer and Richard Hauserman, and Ugene Brzuszkiewic, Wheeling. His nephew, Brian Rainer, 5, served as ring bearer.

After the 3 p.m. double ring ceremony there was a dinner with dancing for 200 at Mystic Harbour, Arlington Heights. The newlyweds then left for a honeymoon in Hawaii and California.

Now living in Rolling Meadows, Vicky works for Kohl's Foods, Hanover Park, and Wally for Martinique Coiffures, Arlington Heights. He also teaches at Academy II Advanced Arts of Hair Design.

Gail Ebner-Thomas Stockfisch

Instead of standing with their backs to their guests Gail Ebner and Thomas Stockfisch chose to face the audience when they exchanged marriage vows July 9 in Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church. The 2 p.m. double-ring service also included an explanation of their own philosophy and objectives for marriage.

Gail approached the altar with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ebner, Arlington Heights, down one aisle, the groom and his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Willard Stockfisch, Park Ridge, down the other.

The service was followed by a buffet dinner in the church's Fellowship Hall after which the newlyweds honeymooned in Chicago. They now make their home in Hoffman Estates.

A '71 GRADUATE of Hersey High, Gail studied at Harper and the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point and is now completing her studies at Trinity College in Deerfield where Thomas is also a student. Thomas is employed at Northwest Community Hospital, Gail as an assistant for Dr. Stockfisch.

Gail chose Susan Evans, Arlington Heights, as her maid of honor, and Cassie Garvey, Appleton, Wis., her sister, Nancy Urbanski, Rockford, and the groom's sisters, Sue and Jill, as bridesmaids.

Mark Stockfisch was his brother's best man, and ushers were Russ Daughtry and Kevin Matson, Arlington Heights, the bride's brother, Bruce Ebner, Bartlett, and Kerry Parmenter, Mundelein.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace R. Wilson

Gail Ebner-Thomas Stockfisch

Instead of standing with their backs to their guests Gail Ebner and Thomas Stockfisch chose to face the audience when they exchanged marriage vows July 9 in Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church. The 2 p.m. double-ring service also included an explanation of their own philosophy and objectives for marriage.

Gail approached the altar with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ebner, Arlington Heights, down one aisle, the groom and his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Willard Stockfisch, Park Ridge, down the other.

The service was followed by a buffet dinner in the church's Fellowship Hall after which the newlyweds honeymooned in Chicago. They now make their home in Hoffman Estates.

A '71 GRADUATE of Hersey High, Gail studied at Harper and the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point and is now completing her studies at Trinity College in Deerfield where Thomas is also a student. Thomas is employed at Northwest Community Hospital, Gail as an assistant for Dr. Stockfisch.

Gail chose Susan Evans, Arlington Heights, as her maid of honor, ard Cassie Garvey, Appleton, Wis., her sister, Nancy Urbanski, Rockford, and the groom's sisters, Sue and Jill, as bridesmaids.

Mark Stockfisch was his brother's best man, and ushers were Russ Daughtry and Kevin Matson, Arlington Heights, the bride's brother, Bruce Ebner, Bartlett, and Kerry Parmenter, Mundelein.

Nursery school in Hebrew at Beth Tikvah this fall

Beth Tikvah Congregation in Hoffman Estates is planning a nursery classroom conducted entirely in Hebrew for 4-year-olds this fall.

Sponsored by the Board of Jewish Education Early Childhood Center, the language will be taught by Netanya Sharon, who will introduce Hebrew vocabulary around school routines, holidays and the fall season.

By December Mrs. Sharon expects to be speaking Hebrew to the children most of the time, and the goal is to have the class conducted completely in Hebrew by February.

Informal activities have been planned for 3-year-olds, also in a Hebrew environment, according to Fran Cohen, coordinator of the studies.

Pair married 60 years

Wednesday evening was a big occasion for Gustav and Loretta Brocker of Rolling Meadows. It was their 60th wedding anniversary.

To celebrate, the couple went to dinner at The Atrium with the immediate family and later joined relatives and friends for a party in their son's home.

The Brockers have lived in Rolling Meadows nearly two years, in an apartment just across the street from their only son, Charles, and his family.

THEY MOVED TO the Midwest from New Jersey, their home since their marriage in Jersey City on Aug. 1917. Gustav retired from Mobil Oil Co. several years ago and took his wife to Florida to live. Not completely happy therre after a while, they returned to New Jersey but finally decided to come to Rolling Meadows to be near their son.

Gustav is 81 and Loretta 83. They are active members of St. Colette parish in Rolling Meadows.

The anniversary pair has four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Greed brings on fat set

As all proper bridge writers have pointed out many times, greed is a terrible thing and misplaced greed even worse.

South's three notrump call is a good example. He had no stopper in diamonds and no reason to expect his partner to produce one. If South had wanted to try for game he could have bid three hearts, which would have elicited three notrump from North. To quote North after South managed to go down two tricks, "I would have made the game."

East played his 10 of diamonds at trick one and South was in with the jack. At this point many South players would have tried the book safety play in clubs, laid down the ace and made their nine tricks. But South was greedy. Even though he was in a doubtful contract, the game was match points and he wanted overtricks. He entered dummy with the king of spades, led the seven of clubs and finessed his queen. West followed with the jack!

South had given West a chance to set the stage for South's downfall and South fell with a loud crash.

He led a spade to dummy's ace. Played the 10 of clubs and let it ride. Now the defense cashed two spades as well as the three diamonds that were always there and set the cinch hand two tricks.

Ask Andy

Most cactuses succulents, grow in desert

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Paul Kohnen, 13, of Tucson, Ariz., for his question:

IS THE CACTUS A SUCCULENT?

More than 1,000 different kinds of plants are found in the cactus family. Most grow in Mexico and the southwestern part of the United States. Most thrive in hot and dry regions and are well suited to live with very little rainfall. Cactuses, in most cases, don't have leaves and they have built-in systems for holding moisture.

The word succulent, when referring to vegetation, describes a fleshy plant that has thick stems or branches in which water is stored. Succulent plants grow in dry places and especially like the deserts. Almost all of the many types of cactuses can be described as succulents.

Many of the cactuses come equipped with sharp bristles and spines that help to protect them from animals. Since there isn't too much water available, the cactus has its own system of stretching out the supply to last all summer long — and the spines are part of the plan.

Roots are most cactus plants are covered with a cork-like bark that lies close to the surface. The root system stretches far out so it can catch lots of water even from light rains or quick floods that occasionally happen in the deserts. A 3-foot cactus may often have a root system that stretches out more than 10 feet.

The saguaro or giant cactus wins honors as being the largest cactus in the United States. You'll occasionally find forests of them growing in California and Arizona. They can grow to be 50 feet tall. Indians in Arizona use the dried woody ribs for fuel and also for building their homes. The fruit, which ripens in June and July, is eaten fresh or as preserves.

A favorite succulent is the cereus group of cactuses. Included here are the night-blooming cereus whose spectacular flowers open only when the sun goes down.

The barrel cactus has extremely tough spines to protect a large water supply. The plant has saved the life of many thirsty travelers in the desert, and the spines at one time were used by the Indians as fishhooks.

Plant scientist Luther Burbank developed a spineless cactus that has proved to be most useful as a source of food for both men and animals.

When potting a succulent for your home, be sure that you select light, sandy soil that has very good drainage. This is important for all members of the cactus family.

Andy sends the book 200 Illustrated Science Experiments to Timothy Newcomb, 9, of South Milwaukee, Wis., for his question:

WHAT ARE WOOD TICKS?

Summer is when you'll run into the pest called a wood tick. Quite often you will find him when you are walking through the woods or camping in the forest.

The tick will attach itself to your skin. Often he will pick an arm or a leg. Great care must be taken in removing the creature. If he is pulled off forcibly, it is possible that his toothed beak will break off and remain inside the flesh. When this happens, there's a good chance a festering sore will follow.

The easiest way to get rid of a wood tick is to put a drop of kerosene, chloroform or even gasoline on the tick. Use great care. With just a bit of any of these fluids the tick will quickly loosen his hold and come off the skin easily.
